INDICTMENTS ARE RETURNED

Against American Sugar Refining Company.

EIGHT INDIVIDUALS ARE ALSO INDICTED

Fourteen Counts in Each of the Indictments.

Charges Are the Individual and Collective Conspiracy in Restraint of Trade in Interstate Commerce Business in the Manufacturing and Shipping of Refined Sugar How Rival Is Wiped Out.

New York, July 1.—The federal grand jury came into the criminal branch of the United States court this morning and presented a number of indictments in the American Sugar Refining company case.

The indictments are very voluminous, and the parties indicted are the American Sugar Refining company, W. B. Thomas, Arthur Donner, C. H. Senff, John Mayer, G. H. Frazen, John E. Parsons, T. B. Harned and G. E. Kissell.

Thomas McIlvain appeared for all the indicted men, except Harned and Kissell. J D. Guthrie appeared for Kissell. Harned was not represented in court by counsel.

Assistant United States District Attorney Crim asked that the indicted men appear to plead to the charges and Judge Hand, who was presiding, set the cases down for a hearing Tuesday at 10:30 a. m., when the indicted men must appear.

No arrangements for bail have as yet been made.

The indictments consist of fourteen counts against each of the defendants, charging them individually and collectively with conspiracy in restraint of trade in interstate commerce business in the manufacturing and shipping of refined sugar. They are also charged with violation of the Sherman anti-trust act.

It is charged that by making a loan to the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company, which loan was later foreclosed, the American Sugar Refining company was able to throttle one of its greatest competitors. It was on this charge that the indictments were returned by the grand jury this morning.

A Long Investigation.

The indictment today is the result of an investigation by the grand jury extending over many weeks, brought about by the settlement of a suit of the Pennsylvania company against the trust for $30,000,000 triple damages, for $10,000,000. The opening paragraph of the indictment, which is the most voluminous returned by the New York federal grand jury in many years, sets forth that the American Sugar Refining company controls about ninety per cent. of the trade and commerce in raw and refined sugar in the United States and is engaged in trade and commerce within the meaning of the Sherman act under which the indictment is found.

Then follows the statement that the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company was organized six years prior to the finding of the indictment and a history of the concern to the present time. After setting forth that the Pennsylvania company equipped a plant in Philadelphia to engaged in the business of "refining and marketing sugar," at a cost of $2,000,000, the indictment charged:

"The American Sugar Refining company and the individuals here indicted with it were then engaged in a corrupt and unlawful conspiracy, that is:

To Detriment of Public.

"A conspiracy unreasonably to restrain and eliminate free competition and to eliminate all competition with the defendant corporation by the said Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company to the very great injury and detriment, financial and moral, of the people of the United States, and this by and through the unfair, deceitful, unlawful and corrupt means of the said corporation defendant and the individuals indicted with it."

The indictment then goes on to show that Adolph Segal was the treasurer of the Champion Construction company which controlled 26,000 shares of stock, a majority in the Pennsylvania concern; that Segal borrowed from Gustave E. Kissel, as agent for an undisclosed lender, $1,250,000 giving as security therefor the 26,000 shares of Pennsylvania stock; that Kissel had no reason to suppose that the undisclosed lender desired anything more than the payment of interest on, and the repayment of the amount loaned, or had any motive for preventing the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company from carrying on its business: that Adolph Segal at that time, as the defendant then well knew, was dependent upon the dividends on the Pennsylvania stock for the payment of interest and principal of the loan and that the suspension of the business of the Pennsylvania company would result in placing of Segal's finances in a ruinous condition.

Trust in Control.

It is then set forth that the defendants with his end in view, and knowing that the closing of the plant would prevent Segal from repaying the loan and give the defendants complete control, used every means in their power to extend the time of said loan, originally given for one year. It is charged that they refused arbitrarily to accept payment of these obligations from him either before or at the time of its maturity, thereby gaining control of the Pennsylvania company.

The said defendants used their control of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company to prevent the said Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company from carrying on or engaging in the business for which it was organized, prepared and intended, thereby contriving to bring about the ruin of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company through inaction, the destruction of its property and the decay of its facilities for the purpose of preventing competition."

Mother and Daughter Die.

Chicago, July 1.—Mrs. Mamie Cunningham, of Louisville, Kentucky, and her daughter, Mamie, three, were found dead in bed today at the home of J. C. Cunningham, a relative. They had been asphyxiated by illuminating gas.

OPPOSITION TO VISIT OF CZAR

Grows as Date of the Event Approaches.

SOCIALISTS OF THE CONTINENT

Are Terrible in Earnestness of Their Purpose.

England and Sweden Are Especially Aroused Over the Issue, the Latter More Than Ordinarily Owing to the Assassination of General Beekman Last Week—Europe Being Flooded with Literature.

Brussels, July 1.—Through the international Socialist bureau, the pulse of the European Socialist organization, can be felt the terrible earnestness with which the Socialists of every European country are opposing the visit of Nicholas II, czar of all the Russians, to England, France, Sweden and Italy.

The opposition in each of the countries which Nicholas will visit is being compactly organized: demonstrations are being made in public; and the Socialist press is animadverting against the wrongs of the Russian people and the oppression of the Russian government.

A circular letter, reciting what it terms the "infamous policies" of Nicholas has been sent to the general committees of European Socialists demanding that speedy action be taken to voice the indignation of the masses. The Socialists of Italy and France especially are called on to protest against the visit of the Czar.

Already Aroused.

England and Sweden are already aroused over the issue, the latter more especially since the killing of Major General Beekman last week by an assassin who admitted that a conspiracy was under way to kill the Czar during the European trip. In Italy a movement has been started by the Socialists to hiss the Czar if he appears in public. The Socialist members of the Italian legislature are declaring that they will oppose the visit of the Czar even if their attitude is prejudicial to the interests of Italy.

The argument used with greatest effect by the Socialists is that the reception of the Czar by European monarchs virtually countenances the horrors of Russian government by assassination.

The Azef incident and hundreds of similar cases are being recited at great length and old stories of Russian officialdom are being revived.

MESSINA ONCE MORE SHAKEN

All the Standing Walls Are Crumbled

AND SHELTER-HOUSES LEVELLED TO GROUND

By Two Shocks Which Occur This Morning.

Terror-Stricken, the Inhabitants of the New Village Being Built Up on the Ruins of the Old City Flee for Their Lives—All Calabria Feels the Shocks, Most Violent Since Catastrophe.

Messina, July 1.—All of the standing walls among the ruins of the old town, and several of the newly-created shelter-houses, were shaken to the ground today by two severe earthquake shocks, which spread consternation among the inhabitants of the new village which is growing out of the ruins of the destroyed town.

The first shock lasted ten seconds, and it caused panic among the inhabitants, who abandoned their houses and rushed out into the open.

The tottering walls of the old ruined quarter crashed to the ground, throwing stones and debris to great distances. Many of the fleeing men and women were struck by falling debris and were injured, but none fatally.

The shocks were felt all over Calabria, especially at Mileto, where the population was driven into the fields.

Severe at Reggio.

The shocks were felt severely at Reggio, where nearly every wall not thrown down by the December earthquake was destroyed.

Earthquake shocks of a minor nature have been frequent here of late, but today's was particularly severe. It was undulating and vertical, and was accompanied by deep rumbling sounds. Men who were present in both the shock of December 28 and the shock today declare today's was of far greater intensity than the December shock, and the fact that there were no big buildings standing is the only thing that prevented a greater loss of life. Many of the wooden houses that had been erected with the relief fund raised in America were not thrown down by today's earthquake, though nearly every other building in the city was destroyed.

Some Lives Lost.

It is believed, this afternoon, that a number of lives were lost in the two terrible quakes which visited Messina and Reggio this morning. Soldiers digging in the ruins have recovered the bodies of a woman and her dead babe clasped to her breast.

As soon as the bodies were found, General Porpora, commanding in the ruined city, ordered all possible troops to the rescue work, in the belief that other bodies may be found entombed and that possibly some lives may be saved.

The work of rescue and search is most dangerous, owing to the constantly falling walls, but the troops are digging into the ruins in the hope that they will be able to save lives.

CHINESE VICTIM OF HIGHBINDERS

Body Found in Washtubs of His Laundry.

New York, July 1.—Yung Yow, who runs a laundry on Stanton street was killed by Highbinders last night.

Yung Yow's body was found in two tubs in his laundry this morning. His head was submerged in the water in one tub, while his feet were in another. A silken cord, bound tightly about his throat, showed that he had been strangled to death before being placed in the tubs.

That the Chinaman died fighting was proven by the blood stains about the laundry. Bloody prints of fingers on his body showed that his assassins had been wounded, while bloody footprints about the floor show they had trampled in blood.

The police could find no clues to the murderer.

Five-Hundred-Barrel Well.

Steubenville, O., July 1.—Castner Brothers' oil well on the Wiggington farm drilled in last night is a producer of over 500 barrels in twenty-four hours. It is the fourth well drilled by the firm on the same farm and all of them are producing over 300 barrels daily.

EIGHTEEN WOMEN TO SET PRECEDENT

Will Tour Europe for Two Months Without Trunks.

New York, July 1.—Determined to set a precedent that will attract the attention of women travelers—namely, to travel two months abroad with personal effects for each woman packed in two suit-cases, a party of eighteen women sailed on the Hamburg today. They will not need porters, either, for each woman has determined to carry her own baggage at every point. Miss Joyce Cullen, artist and linguist of New York, chaperoned the party. The Chicago women in the party are Mrs. William Darrow, Miss Margaret Maginn, Miss Eleanor Slevin, Mrs. Bert Wright, Miss Marguerite Gallagher, Miss Mary Ryan, Miss B. E. Canfield, Mrs. Mary Forbes and Mrs. Louise Roberts. Each will carry three changes of silk dresses, silk lingeries, shoes and the necessary toilet accessories. Each will wear one hat throughout the entire journey, but they devised removable trimmings for the hat so that, by a few minutes' work it can be changed into a different looking hat for every day of the week. The silk lingerie can be closely packed and will not occupy much room.

"We are going to Europe to see the sights and not to be worried with trunks," is the explanation the women give to their experiment.

Jury Is Secured.

Detroit, Mich., July 1.—With the final acceptance of a jury in the trial of Dr. G. K. Boyajian for the killing of his nephew, Hartoon Gostanian, and the address of Prosecutor Van Zile, completed late yesterday afternoon, the trial of the Armenian physician got fairly under way today with the beginning of the taking of evidence by the state.

THE MURDERER OF PETROSINO

Is Believed To Be Under Arrest in Mexico.

MEXICAN POLICE APPEAR CONFIDENT

That They Have Pato Caminitti Domenico.

Feel So Sure of Identity of Prisoner, Who Gives Them the Name of Carmelo Alvaro, That They Have Been in Communication with Italian and American Authorities and Expect Requisition Papers.

Mexico City, July 1.—That Carmelo Alvaro, arrested by the police here, is Pato Caminitti Domenico, slayer of Detective Petrosino, is the belief of the Mexican police, who for more than a week have been trying to establish the identity of their prisoner. The man was arrested a week ago Tuesday, but the fact was kept secret while the police investigated his statement regarding his movements since he has been in Mexico.

The prisoner, who is about thirty-four, declared he had been in Mexico for four months. The police declare that he has been here only two months. On this statement they based their investigation and declare that the man's story of his movements is inaccurate.

They feel so sure of their identification of Alvaro as the famous Black Hand leader that they have been in communication with detectives in America and Italy and expect that a request for requisition papers will soon be made.

PLACES GUM IN ESPANA'S MOUSTACHE

And Loses His Life at Hands of Proud Wearer.

Mahanoy City, Pa., July 1.—The pride of Espana Toska's life is his flowing moustache, which he wears a la Kaiser and which he nourishes with great care. Mariena Toska envied Espana those flowing hirsute adornments and besmeared them with chewing gum. Wild with anger, Espana killed Mariena. Espana escaped and the members of the state constabulary are searching for him. The murder occurred at Girardville, Pennsylvania.

The good times we long for will not come in the guise of forty-eight-cent watches.

SUDDEN GOING OF TAKAHIRA

Is Cause of Speculation at Washington.

REASON GIVEN NOT WHOLLY CREDITED

Many Important Questions To Be Discussed.

Japan Is Soon To Renew a Number of Treaties, and It May Be That His Advice Is Desired at Tokyo on Them—Move of America To Enter Chinese Commercial Field May Be Explanation.

Washington, July 1.—Despite the apparent purpose of his visit to Japan, as officially announced, there is a supposition in diplomatic circles that the hasty departure of Ambassador Takahira is of a much more mysterious character than has been intimated. It may mean that the ambassador is slated for a post at Tokyo in view of his knowledge of the relations of Japan with America, or it may mean that Japan desires a more intimate discussion of half a dozen problems in which America is the dominating factor.

The ambassador's departure was rather sudden. The state department had received no intimation of his leaving until the last moment. At that time, it was announced that he was called to Tokyo, to discuss with his government, treaties soon to be negotiated with the powers to replace those about to expire. It is pointed out, however, that the treaty with the United States continues in force until 1911, and that, therefore, there can be no urgent need to prepare for negotiations in that quarter.

Far from Clear.

It is far from clear how Ambassador Takahira's presence is necessary to a discussion of treaties with France, Great Britain and Germany, unless they are to be framed with the ultimate purpose of setting an example for the one to be signed later with the United States.

The most urgent reason for his withdrawal is believed to be the readjustment of the Japanese tariff and its effect on trade relations with the United States. The Mikado's government purposes to establish a higher protective tariff on the expiration of the present treaties which require the consent of the powers to such action. As the United States treaty expires a year later than the others, it is probable that the Japanese government desires to ascertain the point of view of America before attempting to raise the tariff.

Other Important Questions.

At the same time the immigration question will probably be opened with Great Britain, as the hostility towards the Japanese is almost as great in Australia and Canada as it is on the Pacific coast of the United States. Whether or no Japan proposes to attempt a readjustment of the understanding with America on this point remains to be seen.

Of still more pressing importance is the recent move on the part of the United States to enter ino an aggressive campaign to secure a proportionate share of the developing commerce of China, Japan's greatest prospective field.

Although Japan is in much too weak a financial condition to make active protest, it is taken for granted that she will bring every effort to bear, in checkmating America's moves to this end. Instead of remaining largely a natural influence as heretofore, by Secretary Knox's initiative the United States lines up with Germany and Great Britain, for an active movement to develop the Chinese market for the benefit of the western world. Japan's prospects are accordingly overshadowed to that extent.

There is, therefore, much room to speculate over the real object of Ambassador Takahira's sudden recall. More likely than not, important announcements will be forthcoming shortly.

Scathing Denunciation.

Washington, July 1.—A scathing denunciation of alleged railroad discrimination against the city of Utah, in favor of Pacific coast cities, is contained in the complaint filed today with the Interstate Commerce commission today by the Commercial club traffic bureau of Salt Lake City, against the Harriman lines, Santa Fe; Burlington, Denver & Rio Grande; Illinois Central and half a dozen other railroad corporations.

DOROTHEA GOES TO OHIO NAVAL BOYS

After a Controversy Between Ohio and Illinois.

Chicago, July 1.—The naval training ship, Dorothea, will be turned over to Lieutenant Commander C. B. Haskins, of the Ohio Naval militia, tomorrow after a clash between the naval officers of Illinois and Ohio lasting several days.

When the gunboat, Nashville, was brought to Chicago as a naval training ship for the Illinois naval militia, acting Secretary of the Navy Winthrop ordered Captain W. F. Purdy, commanding the Illinois naval militia, to turn the Dorothea over to the Ohio militia. Purdy refused to do so, and Lieutenant Commander Haskins, of Ohio, telegraphed Winthrop that Purdy had not only refused to do so, but had stripped the Dorothea of practically all her equipment. Purdy surrendered the vessel today when he received orders from Governor Deueen to do so.

LITTLE COLUMBUS GIRL DISAPPEARS

And Man with Grudge Against Family Is Missing.

Columbus, O., July 1.—Fifteen-year-old Mildred Druggan has disappeared as completely as if the earth had opened before her. Mrs. Hattie Druggan, the widowed mother, is on the verge of prostration, and James Thompson, her son-in-law, who had a grudge against the family and who disappeared at the same time as the little girl, is still missing and has left no trace of her whereabouts.

Little Mildred Druggan was last seen, bare-headed and clad in a light summer frock, on the street at 11 o'clock on the morning of May 29. She had left home a few moments before, telling her mother that she was going to visit a school friend.

SNARSKY RACES ACROSS PERSIA

With Credentials Making Him Ruler of Persia.

HOPES TO REACH THE CAPITAL CITY

Before the Forces of the Persian Liberals.

It Is Unofficially Admitted Today That the Culmination of the Contemplated Grab of the Shah's Domain Is at Hand—Grave Concern Is Felt by the Foreign Residents of City of Teheran.

St. Petersburg, July 1.—With General Snarsky at the head of a Russian army corps racing across Persia from Tabriz to Teheran with credentials which make him practically ruler of Persia, it is unofficially admitted here today that the culmination of the Czar's long contemplated "grab" of the Shah's domain is at hand. Snarsky, under orders from the foreign office, is hurrying to reach Teheran before the Persian Liberals, or Bakhtiaris, can move troops from their headquarters at Teheran. The rebels under their leader, Sardarasad, resumed their march toward Teheran after a futile attempt by the Russian diplomatic officials to stay their course. If they reach Teheran before Snarsky and his army arrive there is no doubt that bloody street fighting followed by pillage will be the fate of the city.

Grave Concern Felt.

Grave concern is felt for the foreign residents in Teheran, as many of the rebels are of a most savage type and Sardarasad is reported to have designs on the throne. The only government troops now in Teheran are 1,200 Persian Cossacks, and there is no hope that they would be able to hold off the rebels if the later arrive before Snarsky.

Arrangements have been made at the Russian legation in Teheran to receive and care for the Shah as soon as hostilities begin. This precaution was taken as soon as it became known that the rebels had left their headquarters at Kasvin.

With the Shah under the protection of the Russian legation and a Russian force in control of Teheran, the rule of the Shah would be practically at an end, and the control of Persia, which Russia has so long sought, would become a reality.

TENNESSEEANS RUSH FOR BARS

As the Hour of Midnight Approaches,

AND STATE GOES INTO DRY COLUMN

Passing of Saloons Marked by Hilarity.

Brewers Get in First Blow by Securing an Order Temporarily Restraining the Officers of the Law from Interfering with Their Businesses—Will Carry Matter to the Highest Tribunal.

Memphis, Tenn., July 1. — As the clocks in the steeples struck 12, Tennessee passed out of existence as a whisky state and quietly glided over into the prohibition column. At midnigt the Holladay statewide prohibition bill went into effect. This law makes it illegal to sell whisky or other alcoholic beverages within four miles of any schoolhouse in the state.

The passage of the saloon in Memphis and in other cities throughout the state was marked by scenes of unusual hilarity. The celebration started in the morning, continued throghout the day and lasted until the very moment of closing, when there was a rush to purchase one last farewell drink over the bar.

Saloons and grogshops were crowded with lively revelers. Extra police precautions were taken here, Mayor Maloney instructing the chief of police to detail a patrolman to every city block wherein is located a saloon. This was done at the request of the saloon men, who feared that the crowds about to start on the long Marathon across the desert of prohibition would overstep the bounds of good behavior in some instances. But it was in the main a good-natured yet sorrowing throng which indulged in their last farewell revelry.

Brewers Obtain Injunction.

Memphis, Tenn., July 1. — In the preliminary skirmish of a legal battle which, it is declared, is destined for the highest court in the land for final adjudication, those who favor the continuance of the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages in Tennessee gained the advantage in the issuance of an order by Chancellor H. Dent Mentor which restrains, temporarily, the enforcement of the manufacture and sales act of the recent legislature, the latter of which went into effect at midnight, so far as it will interfere with the operation of the Tennessee Brewing company's plant.

Girl Cashier Murdered.

San Francisco, July 1.—Miss Caroline Brasch, cashier for a contracting company, was murdered, presumably by one of the concern's employes. The police say the man shot the girl during a dispute over the deduction of $5.75 from his time check. J. Novak, a quarry laborer, is being sought by the police as the murderer.

Charleston Is Dry.

Charleston, W. Va., July 1. — For the first time in half a century West Virginia's state capital became wholly dry at midnight by the refusal of the Charleston city council to grant a renewal of saloon licenses.

LOEB IS AFTER THE SMUGGLERS

Police Force of Five Hundred Men Being Used.

New York, July 1.—A police force of 500 men, to patrol the shipping points along the river and harbor, is the latest measure taken by Collector of the Port Loeb to stamp out the smugglers who have systematically defrauded the government for years. Three hundred of the customs policemen are to be sworn in on July 15 and the remaining 200 during the summer.

The new force will be given the power of seizure and arrest and will be armed with revolvers and short clubs. The force will be divided into three platoons, with a captain, lieutenant and roundsmen over them. One of the deputy supervisors of the port will have charge of the entire system.

The patrolling of piers, ships and the water front to guard against smugglers and other enemies of the revenue service, will be the duty of the new policemen, who will receive salaries ranging from $840 to $1,095 a year.

He who honestly seeks to save another finds himself.

THE SIGEL GIRL KNEW TOO MUCH

Of the Workings of Chinese Secret Society,

AND IS PUT TO DEATH BY GANG

The Dead Girl Is Not a Victim of Jealousy.

New York Police Have a New Theory—Believe Seven Chinamen Are Implicated in the Murder of the Young Missionary Worker, and Have Some Facts at Hand To Bear Out New Theory.

New York, June 30.—That six Chinamen besides Leon Ling were implicated in the murder of Elsie Sigel, is the latest theory of the police, who are shadowing two of the new suspects and may place them under arrest shortly.

The police believe that four Chinamen had an actual hand in the killing of the girl. A fifth, Chung Sin, admits that he looked through a door and saw the murder, while two others were certainly accesories in that they had a guilty knowledge of the gruesome contents of Leon Ling's trunk.

Until the discoveries which led the police to adopt this theory, the authorities were sure that Elsie Sigel was killed by a jealous Chinaman, Leon Ling, because she preferred his rival, Chu Gain.

Now, however, that they believe seven men were implicated in the crime, they are seeking for a deeper motive that jealousy. It is suggested that the girl, through her association with Leon Ling and Chu Gain, and other Chinamen, while ostensibly performing missionary work in Chinatown, may have given the girl too much knowledge of the inner workings of the acts of the Chinese secret society of which the Chinamen were members.

Conceal Source of Information.

The police refuse to reveal the source of their information that the missionary was the victim of a gang, but they declare they have made important discoveries and may make arrests shortly. No clew has been found, however, as to the present whereabouts of the missing Leon Ling, believed to have been the arch-murderer.

That Leon and his accomplices, if he really had aid, tried to dispose of the body numerous times before finally leaving it in the trunk in Leon's room, is proven by the latest police investigation.

The police have found that after the murder, which they are sure was committed in the Eighth avenue room, Leon placed the body in a trunk and took the trunk in an express wagon to No. 370 west 16th street, where Yung Wah run a laundry.

Attempt at Burial.

Yung Wah is a cousin of Young Dat, Leon's most intimate friend. In the cellar of Yung Wah's laundry, where the expressman first carried the body, the police have found that boards in the floor had been torn up and that efforts had been made to dig a grave. There was but a few inches of dirt, however, as the house is built on a rock foundation, and the effort to dig a grave sufficiently deep to cover the trunk proved unsuccessful. Then Leon gave Yung Wah sufficient money to have a new floor laid in the cellar. Immediately after this was done, Yung Wah sold his laundry business and disappeared. The police believe his disappearance is proof that he knew of the crime.

Finding that he could not dispose of the body in the 126th street place, Leon had the trunk taken to Newark, where he tried to leave it. Unsuccessful there, too, he brought it back to his room in eighth avenue and left it there when he fled.

Traces of Girl's Garments.

It is also believed the telegram sent from Washington, signed with the initials of the deal girl, and telling her family she was there and not to worry, was composed in Yung Wah's laundry and sent to Washington by a Chinaman, who had it wired to the Sigel family. The police found in this laundry a rough draft of the "Don't worry" telegram, together with Elsie Sigel's full name and address. In a stove in the laundry there have been found portions of burned garments, which are believed to have been Elsie Sigel's clothing, which up to this time have been missing.

The two Yung cousins were members of the same secret society as Leon Ling and aided him to cover up his crime and escape, the police declare.

FARMERS SHOOT AT DAYTON AERONAUTS

Latter Unhurt and Print Newspaper in the Clouds.

Hamilton, O., June 30.—The first newspaper ever printed in a balloon was received in Butler county when a balloon from Dayton passed over the western part of this county. The bag was equipped with a corps of newspaper men and a printing press by a Dayton paper, and as it soared over the town miniature copies of the paper, printed in the balloon basket, were thrown to the ground.

When the balloon reached Woods station copies were sent down telling of an exciting experience at Darrtown, when farmers fired at the balloon with rifles. The balloon was unharmed.

Lands In Indiana.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 30.—The balloon Hoosier, G. L. Bumbaugh pilot, which left Dayton, O., landed five miles south of North Vernon, Ind.

Inspect Thundercloud.

St. Louis, Mo., June 30.—Whipped helplessly to and fro like a feather by a 60-mile gale, in a dense stormcloud 10,000 feet above the earth, John Barry and M. A. Heimann lived through an experience of a lifetime.

Barry, winner of the Indianapolis distance cup, and Heimann, who is seeking a balloon pilot's license, ascended in the Melba. They nearly met death on a derrick at the start, and they were carried swiftly to an altitude of 10,000 feet into a thundercloud, in which the frail bag was dashed about by a hurricane. They landed safely at Rockhill, 10 miles from this city, but Heimann sprained his ankle getting out of the basket.

LAWSON'S DAUGHTER BECOMES A BRIDE

Wedded in Beautiful Dreamwold to Chicago Man.

Scituate, Mass., June 30.—In a bower of the most exquisite products of one of the finest gardens of America Marion Lawson, second daughter of the famous financier and author, Thomas W. Lawson, became today the bride of James Fuller Lord of Chicago. The wedding decorations planned by the bride in yellow, her favorite color, and white brought forth enthusiastic praise from the large bridal party.

Dreamwold, the Lawson estate near this place, is at its best in June, with thousands and thousands of rosebushes and other flowering plants. The ceremony was performed in the beautiful garden.

Today's wedding is the outcome of a meeting of the young couple at the Onwentsia Hunt club at Lake Forest, Ill., something over a year ago. Both bride and bridegroom are lovers of horses, and much of the courtship was carried on while they were mounted on horseback. Mr. Lord is master of the hounds of the Onwentsia club.

FOURTEEN TRUNKS AND ROLLS OF COIN

Attract Attention to Mysterious and Beautiful Immigrant.

New York, July 1.—A special inquiry has been started at Ellis island into the antecedents of the Marquise de Reymonde, in an effort to unravel the mystery with which the beautiful young woman has seen fit to surround herself.

With fourteen trunks and plentifully supplied with money, the woman arrived several days ago in the first cabin of the Greek steamer, Themistocles. On some of her trunks was the name "Madeline de Estoinay," while others bore the crests and name of Marquise de Reymonde. The inspector who examined her remembered that when the Oceanic arrived several weeks ago there was on board a man who gave the name of Edouard de Reymonde, and who was detained at Ellis island until he could give a satisfactory account of himself. The inspector questioned the woman about this man, and her answers were so evasive that she was sent to Ellis island until an investigation can be made.

Immediately after the woman was detained, De Reymonde appeared at Ellis island and sought to have the woman permitted to enter. He gave a fictitious address and the authorities decided to detain the woman pending further investigation.

Youngstown, O., July 1.—Attorney H. A. Ernst, who represents Miss Mary McCuen, of Johnstown., Pennsylvania, in her suit to recover her eight-year-old child, Jean, from Sister Augustine, has notified Probate Judge Griffith that the mother has given the nun full right to keep the child.

It is the unanimous opinion of the thousands who have taken the Bitters that it is the best for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Diarrhoea, Kidney Ills, Biliousness and Malaria. Don't fail to try it today.

TRAGEDY TAKES AFFINITY TURN

Eastman and Mrs. Woodill Are "Soul Mates."

LETTER IS FOUND IN THE BUNGALOW

In Handwriting of the Victim of Eastman.

It Is Signed "Edith," and Plainly Shows That the Murdered Woman and Fugitive Broker Had Known Each Other Before Meeting in Maryland Village—Burning Passages Reveal Their Attachment.

St. Michaels, Md., June 30.—That Mrs. Edith May Woodill was madly and desperately in love with her slayer, "Lame Bob" Eastman, was revealed in a letter signed "Edith," parts of which were found in the bungalow of the murderer and suicide.

The missive is in the murdered woman's handwriting, and not only indicates attachment for the man, but apparently proves that they had been acquainted for at least a year before their meeting here.

Among the passages in the note signed "Edith" are the following murmurings of an imprisoned soul:

"Is the iron immodest when it creeps through the loadstone and clings to its side? Is the seed immodest when it sinks into the ground with budding lift? Is the cloud bold when it softens into rain and falls to earth because it has no other choice, or is it brazen when it nestles on the bosom of heaven's arched dome and, sinking into the blue-black infinity, ceases to be itself?

Describes Soul Yearnings.

"Is the human soul immodest when, drawn by force it can not resist, it seeks a stronger soul which absorbs its ego as the blue sky absorbs a floating cloud, and as the warm earth swells the sea, as the maget draws the iron?

"I do not feel myself to be bold or wrong in myself for drifting toward you as I do. I would not feel myself wrong to go straight to you tomorrow.

"There is ever and always some human soul to love and trust us, and whose confidence we would not alter. We are not of our own making and our lives belong to another; Brahma, who rules, is wise.

"And the wonder comes to me that you did not, could not, understand. Surely a life such as yours brings time understanding; you must know lewd from the modest, the untrue from the true."

"Dream of you, did I say? Long for you would be better, for every heart beat seems to cry out against the enormity of the crime that makes me no longer yours. All the best in everything seems only to exist because of you, and for you."

On the same paper, in Eastman's handwriting, is the following: "Little Dear—I can not live after our short —— of bliss, with the coming of you and parting ever before me. If we meet in the unknown let's continue the blissful times that we spent here. I am with you in every thought."

This letter of Mrs. Woodill's and several written by Eastman were made public by the state's attorney.

Eastman Explains Murder.

The letters written by Eastman were found on his body. One of them was addressed to George Taylor, station agent at McDaniel. It said in part: "Appearances are against me, but I had no hand in the tragedy. The poor little girl was practicing the art of taking a fellow from another girl who was under the influence of wine, and hit her three times with a full bottle of champagne.

"The four immediately left, and I removed the evidence of the crime. Am once more making an effort to get bondsmen, for I don't want to get locked up.

"But if not successful, and I can not persuade all parties to come up and take their medicine, why, I will blow off the top of my crazy head, and in that case I wish you would kindly see that all letters found on me are mailed. 'Robbie.'"

TELLS LEADERS TO BE CAREFUL

Taft Airs Party Troubles at Alumni Banquet.

HE SEES GRAVE TROUBLE AHEAD

Intimates That the People May Go into Revolt

And Repudiate Republicanism If the Platform Pledges Are Not Redeemed in Full—Serious Remarks, Coming in Midst of Humorous Reminiscences, Have Profound Effect on His Auditors.

New Haven, Conn., July 1.—Eighteen hundred graduates of Yale, gathered at the annual alumni banquet, heard President Taft sound a serious note of warning to congress and to the leaders of the Republican party when he declared that if the party which placed him in power and so long had controlled the government failed to live up to its promises and the expectations of the people, it would be relegated to the position of a minority opposition.

Mr. Taft made no effort to explain his warnings. The Yale men caught his meaning and the significance of the remarks, coming at this time of the tariff debate, however, and they stood up on their feet and cheered for several minutes. He had been speaking of Secretary of War Dickinson, a Democrat, upon whom Yale conferred an honorary degree. He taunted the Democracy with the best of good humor as to its present-day condition, and this led him into the declaration as to his own party. "Just to show," the president, concluded, amid laughter, "that we have troubles of our own."

Speaks From Impulse.

Mr. Taft had been speaking humorously of recollections of his own college days, which made his sudden change to a serious tone of the important utterance upon national affairs all the more impressive. The president spoke extemporaneously, and his utterances as to the duty of the party of which he is nominally the head seemed the result of a sudden impulse rather than of studied intent.

After paying tribute to others upon whom the university conferred honorary degrees, the president came down to Secretary Dickinson and said:

"You went south of the Mason and Dixon line to get a secretary of war to give a degree to. Well, it is well that you did, because he is going to build the Panama canal, and other universities will follow where you got in early. One of the difficulties that has confronted Brother Dickinson, out in Chicago, where he has a temporary residence, was a discussion as to what constituted an orthodox Democrat, and whether really he ought to be counted as a Democrat if he allowed himself to go into a Republican cabinet. Well, when you come to discuss what is a Democrat these days, you are presented with very much the same difficulty that I have before me now in giving certain rules for the construction of the pure food law as to what is whisky. They say there is 'straight' whisky, and there is 'rectified' whisky and then there is 'imitation' whisky. Now, I speak with a good deal of hesitation in saying whether my friend Dickinson is a 'straight' Democrat or a 'rectified' Democrat. I would not dare to say in his presence that he was an 'imitation' Democrat.

Looks at Home.

"Now, my dear friends, in suggesting differences among Democrats I am far from ignoring some difficulties that there are on our side. I remember in 1904 that Charles Francis Adams gave what I may call a perfectly good Adams reason for the election of the Democratic candidate over the Republican candidate. He said that one of the essentials of a successful free government was an able, patriotic and efficient opposition, and that as the Democratic party had utterly failed in reaching that ideal, he was in favor of putting the Republican party in that place. Now I venture to say that while that may not be the reason which shall move the American people, it is true that if the Republican party does not live up to its promises and what the people expect of it, it will be relegated to a position like of his majesty's opposition. And therefore I may say, by way of caveat, that we have troubles of our own."

TAFT MAKES THE ADDRESS

While President Hadley Confers the Degrees,

AT COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT YALE

Taft Entertained at the Hadley Residence.

Attends the Alumni Dinner at Yale University Hall This Afternoon. Leaves Washington Quietly in His Private Car, the Olympia, and Remains in It Till Time of the Exercises.

New Haven, Conn., June 30.—The conferring of honorary degrees on twelve distinguished men, the awarding of diplomas to 814 graduates, and the annual alumni dinner closed the Yale commencement exercises today.

President Taft, Senator Chauncey M. Depew, Secretary of War Dickinson and numerous other men prominent in public life attended the exercises and the dinner.

The program for the day started at 10 o'clock when the graduating class assembled on the campus attired in their caps and gowns, and marched to Woolsey hall. The route to the hall was a mass of humanity and President Taft was repeatedly cheered as he passed between the two picturesque lines. When the hall was reached, President Hadley conferred the honorary degrees, priezs and awarded the diplomas.

Arrives in New Haven.

New Haven, Conn., June 30.—President Taft's private car, Olympia, was dropped off the Boston-bound federal express at 2:36 a. m. and was quietly sidetracked beside a number of coaches belonging to railroad magnates, capitalists and notables who have come to Yale town to "whoop up" the commencement exercises. A squad of bluecoats immediately surrounded the president's coach and guarded it until shortly before 10 o'clock, when an automobile came to convey him to the university.

It was the president's wish that no demonstration occur at the station, and as a result his departure was quiet. When the campus was reached, the president found the procession of educators, corporation members and students ready to march to Woolsey hall where, the commencement exercises were to be held. Mr. Taft at once donned cap and gown, took his place at the side of President Hadley and the procession to the hall was begun. Less than ten minutes was consumed in the march of cap and gown wearers and as soon as the hall was reached, the regular program was carried out. President Hadley conferred the degrees and diplomas, and Mr. Taft made the address of honor. After the commencement, the president went to the Hadley residence, where he remained until 1 p. m., when he attended the alumni dinner at University hall.

SENDS BULLET INTO TEMPLE

AND TRYING TO KILL HER AND HER BABE

Young Iowa Farmer Run Down by a Posse.

A Month Ago Mrs. Calvin Littlepage Secures a Divorce, Takes Her Baby and Goes to the Home of Her Parents—Littlepage Calls and Is Refused Admittance—The Murder Follows.

Des Moines, Ia., June 30.—Calvin Littlepage, twenty-eight, the Dallas county farmer who murdered his divorced wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Jameson, late yesterday, and then attempted to kidnap his wife and baby, committed suicide early today after having been pursued all night by an armed posse of officers and farmers. There was a bullet hole in the man's right temple and at his side lay a revolver and rifle with which he had held the posse at bay all night.

After Littlepage murdered the Jamesons and fled with his wife and baby Mrs. Littlepage escaped as the posse approached. The man fired five shots at her as she fled, but none hit her. At midnight the posse reported that it had cornered the man in a barn two miles from Valley Junction, and that he had declared he would not be taken alive. The posse surrounded the barn to wait for daylight, but Littlepage must have escaped under cover of darkness. His body was found half a mile from the barn, lying in a swampy field. Just when he ended his life is not known.

Wife Secures Divorce.

Mrs. Littlepage a month ago secured a divorce from her husband and taking her baby with her, went to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Jameson. Littlepage repeatedly demanded to visit her, but her parents refused to let him in the house. Late yesterday Littlepage drove up to the Jameson house and started to enter when Jameson stopped him. Without a word, Littlepage went to his buggy, took out a rifle and shot Jameson through the heart. Mrs. Jameson had fled out the back door but Littlepage followed her and shot her down. She died in a few minutes.

In the meantime Mrs. Littlepage, who had witnessed the murder of her parents, attempted to escape, but Littlepage compelled her and her baby to get into his buggy with him.

Neighbors had been aroused, and a posse was formed which pursued Littlepage for fifteen miles. During the whole ride Mrs. Littlepage struggled fiercely with the desperate man.

When the buggy reached Campbell, Iowa, a deputy sheriff stepped out and pointing a gun at Littlepage called on him to surrender. The man, however seized his baby, held the child in front of him, threatened the deputy with a revolver and escaped. Shortly after this Mrs. Littlepage escaped with her child and Littlepage went on alone.

JERSEY COMMUTER FOOLS HIS FOWLS

Hens Must Have a Garden To Scratch About.

PLANTS GROUND FOR THEIR BENEFIT

The Chickens Must Have a Place To Be Destructive and When It Is Provided They Lay Well and Take on Fat—Scheme Found To Work in Excellent Shape.

"My hens have gone on strike," said the commuter to his seat mate as the train scurried across the Hackensack meadows. "They have absolutely refused to lay just because I administered a little wholesome discipline. Nary an egg have I got for a week now, and this is the season when fresh eggs should be plentiful."

"What did you do to them?" asked his companion.

"Locked 'em up," said the first speaker. "I had to do it, you know, in order to give my garden a chance. They would have had everything dug up if I hadn't curbed their curiosity.

"Of course I didn't shut them up indoors. I built a nice run for them, hedged about with chicken wire, where surely they have enough space to do all the scratching they want; and yet the ungrateful beasts struck on me."

"Give 'em time and they'll lay again all right," said his companion, who spoke as if he knew all about chickens and hens. "They're only a little peevish and will forget about their fancied wrongs in time. Why didn't you put in a garden just for the hens? They would appreciate it, and it isn't much trouble."

"A garden for the hens? Why, that seems a waste of time and energy and land and garden seeds. Did any one ever do it?"

"Sure, I do, and I have found it pays. Every spring I have a good sized piece of ground planted in peas and beans and other garden truck just for my hens. Of course I'm not particular as to how I plant it. Just careless like, you know."

"Then you turn your poultry loose in this garden patch?"

"Lord, no! That wouldn't do at all. Hens are queer critters, and if they thought this garden was for their special benefit they wouldn't care for it at all. I deceive them about this garden.

"I got my idea from an old farmer I used to know. He always sowed a field in grain, usually buckwheat, just for his hens. They would have the time of their lives rooting up the seed grain and pecking away at the young shoots.

"By the end of the summer they would have helped the soil of that field a lot, so that next year it would be ready for a good crop of peas or beans or something that requires a better soil than buckwheat.

"He never let the hens know they were working for him. He was too wise for that. They thought they were spoiling his crop for him and showed their delight by returning a bumper yield of eggs. Also they got so fat in their contented deviltry that they were extra fine eating when the time came for them to surrender their heads.

"He fenced his flock in with wire just as you have done, but he left a few holes by which they could get through into the field he intended for their use. Did they find these holes? You bet they did. They would sneak through just as if they were on a marauding expedition and would scurry back when he hove in sight. Naturally he disturbed them only enough to keep up the deception.

"Well, I took that old farmer's idea and extended it a bit. I haven't enough land to give my hens a whole field of grain, but I can spare them a generous slice of my garden. What I can't give in quantity I make up in quality. Seeds don't cost much; fifty cents covers it.

"I give them peas, beans, carrots and lettuce usually. They are especially fond of tender green lettuce. Well, this bit of garden is right next to the chicken run, and while I'm planting it I can see the hens peeking covetously through the wire that makes their prison.

"The rich brown earth looks so inviting. I keep the ground in the chicken yard well dug up, but they don't care for that. They want to go and scratch where apparently they're not wanted.

"I put in a few flower seeds, too, and maybe set out some flowering plants. All the time the hens get more and more excited with the desire to plunder. I notice sometimes, when they think I'm not around, that they make the circuit of the wire barrier, seeking an opening into these Elysian fields.

"I give the seeds a fair start, let some of the things just peep above the earth, and then some night I go out and cut a few holes in the wire—just snip a few strands here and there and leave the rest to the hens.

"Next day they're all in the garden. They make a great show of piracy in getting through the fence. No doubt they think a kind providence that watches over poultry made those holes. They spend a pleasant summer of destruction and I get plenty of eggs and fat chickens. It's a fair exchange."

"I may try your scheme next year," said the first commuter, "and if it doesn't succeed I'll put the blame on you."—New York Sun.

GULF COAST SWEPT BY SEVERE STORM

Summer Resort Isolated and Fishing Craft Wrecked.

Brownsville, Tex., July 1.—That Tarpon Beach, a summer resort on the lower end of Padre island, three miles from the mainland, is isolated and inundated, with the fate of the inhabitants problematical; that a number of fishing craft and a gasoline launch have been swept out to sea or wrecked, are meager results known here of a storm of extraordinary severity which raged off Point Isabel and the adjacent coast.

Immediately before communication with Tarpon Beach, where a number of persons have taken quarters for the summer, was destroyed, the water had reached a depth of five feet and was still continuing to rise. Before other details could be secured the lone wire which was working was lost.

WARRINGTON DAWSON WAS "DE-LIGHTED"

Over His Reception by Daudi Chwa, King of Uganda.

IMPERIAL ENVOY OF SULTAN THEODORE

The Kid King Bursts into Impassioned Eloquence and Promises To Give the Boss of American Hunters the Giddiest Time of His Strenuous Existence.

Mengo, Uganda Protectorate, British Africa, July 1.—By Warrington Dawson.—I arrived at this point, Tuesday, in advance of the Roosevelt hunting party. Wednesday I had an exclusive interview with Daudi Chwa Kampala, the boy king of Uganda. This youth is the nominal ruler of the country, over which the British government has established a protectorate. When he heard that I was in advance of the party headed by Colonel Roosevelt, he sent special messengers to me and urged me to visit him and have an audience in state. The young ruler speaks excellent English and received me most graciously.

"I have been looking forward with greatest glee to meeting Sultan Roosevelt," he said, "and shall see that he is received with befitting honors when he reaches my country. From travelers and British officials I have heard of the great good he has done to the blacks in America, and I shall receive this man who was a benefactor to my race in a strange land in a most royal manner.

Sultan Roosevelt will find splendid hunting in Uganda, and I shall see that his hunt here is successful. My country abounds in fine elephants, hippopotimi and crocodiles and the royal hunters shall accompany Sultan Roosevelt to see that his hunt is successful.

"But the great sultan will not get any of the white rhinoceroses in Uganda. It is only on the Egyptian Nile that these rare animals can be found, and my hunters report that they are rather plentiful there of late and that a number hrave been killed."

Later the king presented me to the native officials who rule Uganda for the British government. They were tall, intelligent blacks and all spoke good English. Sir Apolo Kagura is the prime minister, Zakana Kizito is the high treasurer and Stanislas Mgwanja is the chief justice. Together, these high dignitaries presented me with an autograph letter of welcome to Colonel Roosevelt which they asked me to present before he arrived.

"We are as dirt under the feet of you," they said to me, "but we shall regard ourselves as even less when the great Sultan Roosevelt honors us with his august presence. It is an honor too great for us, but we shall try, in our feeble way, to show him we appreciate it. Our mountains and plains shall be open to this greater hunter from America. As you shall see the great sultan before he enters the borders of our state, will you say to him that we shall spare neither the rupees from the royal treasury, nor even our heart's blood, if need be, to give him a royal welcome."

When I took my departure the king "backsheeshed" me as the royal messenger from Uganda to Colonel Roosevelt, whom he has designated as the "Great Sultan Roosevelt."

The king gave me a lengthy sealed letter to deliver to Colonel Roosevelt. This letter contains a royal welcome "of one sovereign to another," and urges "Sultan Roosevelt" to come to Uganda for a prolonged stay and promises him game worthy of his rifle.

In leaving the court, Sir Apolo Kagura, the prime minister, presented me with a magnificent robe. Treasurer Kizito presented me with a teapot, and I received several other gifts.

OPEN SHOP ORDER RESULTS IN STRIKE

Seven Thousand Men Quit Steel Trust's Employ.

Pittsburg, July 1.—Fifteen plants, with a capacity of 190 hot mills, were crippled or entirely tied up at midnight by the strike order that went into effect in the union sheet and tin plate mills of the United States Steel corporation, according to claims made by the officials of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers. The total number of men on strike is estimated at 7,000.

The strike is the outcome of the open shop order posted four weeks ago by the American Sheet and Tin Plate company at all its mills throughout West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana.

Ohio plants affected are located at Martins Ferry, Bridgeport, Cambridge, Piqua and Struthers.

The independents signed a twelve-month agreement after refusal on the part of the union to sign for three months.

WORLD'S RAILROADS.

It is interesting to note that in three years, 1904 to 1907, the United States increased its mileage by 7.4 per cent., an average of 2.4 per cent. per year. The world, as already noted, increased by 8.1 per cent. in three years, or at the rate of 2.6 per cent. per year. Thus the United States has not increased altogether as rapidly as the world at large. In the early days of railroading the United States gained much more rapidly than the rest of the world, but naturally a point must be reached with any country when the territory is fairly well served and mileage does not need to be increased largely. With a mile of road for every thirteen square miles of area it would naturally be supposed that this country has done the heavy end of its work, in the building of new road, and the statistics show that the rest of the world has passed it in percentage of annual increase.

As a suggestion relative to the amount of iron and steel involved in railroads, it may be said that, roughly speaking, there are about 45,000,000 tons of rails in use in the steam roads of the United States, about 20,000,000 tons of iron and steel in cars and locomotives and perhaps 10,000,000 tons more in bridges, viaducts and buildings, a grand total of something like 75,000,000 tons for 228,000 miles of road, about 330 tons per mile. These figures are naturally only rough approximations, but they are indicative. The world at large has two and a half times as great a railroad mileage as the United States, and doubtless twice as much iron and steel in use, so that the world has something like 150,000,000 tons of iron and steel engaged in steam railroad transportation. At the rate of increase in the world's railroad mileage shown in the past three years, it would require twenty-seven years to double the mileage.—Iron Trade Review.

Short-Weight Commodities.

If it were not for the recent revelations of the sordid and gross dishonesty practiced for years by officials of the American Sugar Refining company, by which the government was defrauded of thousands of dollars due to the customs revenues, the public would be disposed to give little credence to the statement made the other day by the superintendent of weights and measures of a neighboring state to the effect that purchasers of food in small quantities were cheated out of ten million dollars annually by short weights and short measures.

Recent state and federal laws requiring the accurate branding of packages are undoubtedly making more difficult the sale of adulterations and substitutes, and if the additional requirement of the printing of the weights and measures on all packages could be secured an added safeguard for the consumer would be gained. But even so, the public would soon learn that legislation alone would not suffice to protect them against fraud.

We all have to learn the lesson that there can be no substitute for individual vigilance. When the householder is ready to take the trouble to weigh and measure occasionally the commodities purchased from the tradesmen, and to make instant protest against fraud when detected, carrying the case when need be to the police and the courts, a prominent check will be placed upon the practices of the dishonest, but not before.—Philadelphia Ledger.

AMENDMENT PROVISIONS

For the Tax on Earnings of Corporations.

WHAT THEY ARE AND HOW ENFORCED

The Punishment for Violations of Amendment.

Either Fines or Imprisonment, or Both, May Be Meted Out to Those Who Make False, or Fraudulent Returns—Penalty on the Tax Itself May Also Be Charged—How Reported and When To Be Paid.

Washington, June 26.—The corporation tax amendment, prepared by the finance committee, in conjunction with President Taft and the lawyer members of his cabinet, was reported to the senate today by Senator Aldrich.

It provides that every joint stock company, all associations organized for profit, and every insurance company shall pay an annual tax of two per cent. upon its net income, over and above $5,000.

Reports are to be made on or before March 1, of each year, to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the corporation has its principal place of business. Where false and fraudulent returns are made the commissioner of internal revenue is to add 100 per cent. of the tax assessed upon the corporation and in case of refusal or neglect to verify returns, he is to add fifty per cent. of the tax. Refusal or neglect to make returns by March 1, or the rendering of false returns will make the corporation liable to a penalty of not less than $1,000 nor more than $10,000.

Imprisonment Clause.

Any person who is authorized to make a false return, with intent to defeat or evade the assessment, is liable to a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment not exceeding one year or both, at the discretion of the court.

The net income is to be ascertained by deducting from the gross amount of all ordinary and necessary expenses actually paid; all losses actually sustained, not compensated by insurance, including reasonable allowance for depreciation; interest actually paid on bonded or other indebtedness not exceeding the paid-up capital stock; all sums paid for taxes; all amounts received as dividends upon the stock of other companies, and, in the case of insurance companies, the sum required by law to be carried to the premium reserve fund.

On Present Year.

The tax is to be computed on the net income for the year ending December 31, 1909.

The reports which must be filed by March 1, each year, are to include the total outstanding capital stock; bonded and other indebtedness, the gross income, the amount derived from dividends from other corporations, the total expenses, the total losses, and in case of insurance companies, the sums required by law to be carried to the premium reserve fund; the amount of interest paid within the year on bonded or other indebtedness not exceeding the paid-up capital; the amount paid for taxes under the authority of the United States or any state or territory and the net income.

Access to Records.

When evidence is presented that the reports of any corporation are incorrect, or if any corporation fails to make its return, the commissioner of internal revenue may require further information, or by any regularly appointed revenue agent, especially designated for that purpose, he may examine the books, require the attendance of officers of the corporation and take their testimony. He is also authorized to invoke the aid of any court to require the production of persons, books and papers.

The assessments are to be made by the commissioner of internal revenue, and corporations are to be notified of the amount of tax levies against them by June 1 of each year, and the tax is to be paid by June 30. After the assessments have been made, the returns are to be of public record in the office of the commissioner of internal revenue, and open to inspection.

Gets $3,200 Judgment.

Jacoby & Donithen, attorneys for Charles Crafts in his damage proceeding against the Erie for injuries received at Youngstown in a wreck last March, received a message, Wednesday, that he had been given a judgment in the United States district court for $3,200.

Crafts was a mail clerk running over the Erie. He began the damage suit here and the railroad company had the matter transferred at once to the United States district court.

SUBJECT ONLY TO HONEST CRITICISM.

The decision of the supreme court in the Thatcher disbarment case is exciting wide interest. The trend of public opinion seems to be that judges of any court should not be beyond reach of honest criticism, but that if Thatcher wilfully, maliciously and knowingly attacked the judges with charges of whose falsity he had knowledge, the penalty is not too severe, for these men who lost office, and reputations largely through these attacks have no recourse upon Thatcher or any irresponsible person who might thus assail them. Judges are human, and liable to error but the bench is the chiefest bulwark of our liberties and must be protected. If Thatcher's charges were true, the judges could have been formally impeached and expelled from office under the forms provided by law. Any other proceeding makes the court the subject for attack by roarback and innuendo and weakens the confidence of the people in the judiciary. Thatcher was a sworn officer of the court and knew the remedy prescribed by law for the evils he claimed to exist. His resort to the anonymous circular was a confession of weakness.

THE SAGE FORTUNE.

The $65,000,000 Russell Sage accumulated is fast being scattered. With the intensity and single-purpose that the great fortune was piled up the dollars are now distributed. It was a passion in Russel Sage to make money; it is a passion in Mrs. Sage to spend it upon good works.

It is less than three years since the "pawnbroker of Wall street" figured that in the time Mr. Sage took to gain thirty cents his widow now spends two dollars. And it is the worthiest spending in the world. The endowments have been made with rare good sense. They promise to produce as much benefit for mankind as any philanthropy so far indulged in. An investigation of workingmen's insurance has been made abroad and it is thought that part of the remaining fortune will be set aside for such a purpose in this country.

The natural inclination is to think that Russell Sage would be outraged were it possible for him to know of the disposition made of his hoard. But Mr. Sage knew long before his death the intentions of his wife, should she survive him. She gave away many thousands before he departed and there is no record that Mr. Sage ever opposed her charity. The money lender had no wish for public applause, yet he rather fancied publicity. In his last days he must have smiled grimly at thought of the criticism of himself and of the praise that would come to Mrs. Sage when the stored coins began to leave their coffers.—Toledo Blade.

CITY GARDEN FOR THE LITTLE CONSUMPTIVES

A Field of Work Where They Become Strong.

EMPLOYMENT OF THE YOUNGSTERS

They Are Taken from Homes in Great City and Put Where They Get Plenty of Fresh Air and Sunshine—Finding Enjoyment and Work in the Open Air.

"Three-quarters of an hour! That quick! Just wait till we get this in!" It was one of the little boys at the Bellevue hospital tuberculosis camp talking. He and another lad, each about eight or nine years of age, were shoveling away industriously in the new children's garden which was put in operation last week. Reluctantly they put by their spades and touching their caps to their garden teacher went back on board the day camp boat whence a new pair of enthusiastic young gardeners immediately rushed down to claim their forty-five minutes with the spades.

No less enthusiastic were the little girls. They also came in relays from the boat, and on the deck of the boat were others eagerly awaiting their turn to plant morning glories. One bright eyed little lassie wearing a button which bore the inscription "I love my wife, but oh you kid!" volunteered to tell the names of the flowers bordering the garden. A red phlox was introduced as a dandelion and a geranium as a daisy. The young horticulturist had known the flowers only a week, so she got her names mixed; but her eagerness to be connected with the flowers and to show a knowledge of them was touching.

A little sister worker, kneeling by her plot, pointed out the tiny shoots of onions and leaves of lettuce just peeping above the ground.

"What will you do with them when they are grown?" she was asked. "Will you eat them?" "Oh no!" she said in dismay, "these are mine. We can buy some in the store to eat." A six-year-old admitted that she would rather stay at home with her mother, "but if I come to the boat and the garden I'll be healthy and strong like the flowers."

Not that they are a sickly looking group of children. If you did not know you would never suspect that they are not normal children. This is due to the outdoor life they live. A year ago the old Staten island boat Southfield was moored at the foot of the Bellevue grounds and converted into a tuberculosis camp. Some fifteen men live there throughout the twenty-four hours, but the children, about fifty in number, live at their homes and spend only the days in the camp, from 9 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. They are admitted through the dispensary of the hospital, either showing decided symptoms of the disease or having been exposed to it, and stay until practically cured. They live entirely in the open air. Hot or cold, rain or shine, they have out on deck their school, which is under the jurisdiction of the board of education. They study well and manage to amuse themselves, as children will be children under any circumstances.

Until the garden was installed they did not have enough physical outlet for the energy they were storing up. For this outlet the outdoor work in the garden serves. It also serves as a means of discipline, being used as a reward of merit for both behavior and attendance. That the incentive is strong and the reward desirable is proved by the calls of "May I come down?" from the little waiters above to the teacher down below in the garden.

The garden itself is a small piece of ground, hardly more than fifty feet square, adjacent to the day camp boat, and was used for a refuse dump before it was transformed into a miniature farm this spring.

The methods employed in gardening are those of the International Farm School league, which has been engaged in spreading the children's garden movement for the last seven years. The league has always advocated the beneficial effects of gardening, and the congestion and tuberculosis exhibits of 1908 convinced it that gardening was needed by the little tuberculosis patients. Mrs. Henry Parsons, president of the league, pointed this out to the board of trustees of Bellevue hospital early this spring.

Dr. James Alexander Miller of the Bellevue tuberculosis clinic was consulted and no more was needed. The clinic saw that the garden was advantageous for the children, so now Bellevue has a garden. As a garden it is under the management of Henry Griscom Parsons, secretary of the league, practical adviser and expert, which last title he rather modestly and tentatively advances.

The garden has been filled in with fertile earth and divided into plots, one for every two children. They spade and rake and level, plant and later will cultivate. A regular order in planting is observed, so that the produce by its contrast will impress the children. Thus each plot will have two stalks of corn in the center, flanked by a row of beets, a row of carrots, onions, lettuce, beans and radishes. Many of the children have never yet seen these vegetables growing, so are anxiously awaiting developments.

It is necessary, however, that the children remain under the direct supervision of the clinic authorities. They are primarily not gardeners but patients, and the gardening is intended only as an aid to health. It is for this reason that each child is allowed to shovel and spade and plant for only forty-five minutes at a time. Too much exercise would be as bad or worse than none. When they return to the boat they must rest in steamer chairs for half an hour. Miss Clark, a nurse directly under Dr. Miller's supervision, is always on board with the children and sees to it that the gardening is helping the little patients along to the best and quickest part of health. It is the aim of the clinic and the league to work hand in hand toward this end.

There is something for each to do—the tiniest little girl may at least clip grass with her scissors. When school is over and the days grow warmer and their bodies stronger it is expected that yet more good may be realized. They may then work mornings as well as afternoons.—New York Sun.

ANOTHER COMET.

Before we had time to get a good look at the comet, its head—like that of the ostrich on sundry cowardly occasions—being still visible, and only 120,000,000 miles of its tail coming into view, a Princeton university skysearcher has just discovered another stellar wanderer. This eager and watchful astronomer was making a sweep of the heavenly field from the Princeton observatory, when he noticed a hazy object, round and blurred, in the northwestern corner of the constellation Pisces, and at once realized that he had found a new comet—the first new comet of the year. Later on, reports from other observatories, notably the one at Nice, France, confirmed the Princeton find.

Undoubtedly this is a creditable addition to the logbook of science, but it is not calculated to impress the general observer to any marked extent. Just as an inquiring public is ascertaining the location of the headless comet it isn't pleasant to be suddenly told that another one of the same general family has been noted and mapped and inventoried. At the same time as long as it can't be helped, the American public will feel a proper pride in this discovery by one of the young American astronomers—and it will stand ready if necessary to back up his claim that he saw it first. The exact use and general worthiness of comets nobody seems to know, but that shouldn't be taken as any excuse for not discovering them.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BERESFORD WANTS TEN DREADNAUGHTS

With Many Other Vessels To Restore British Supremacy.

NOTED SEA FIGHTER MAKES JINGO SPEECH

Assails the Naval Administration and Throws Scare into His Countrymen—Outlines a Program More Costly Than a German Invasion of Great Britain.

London, July 1.—In an address that aroused unbounded enthusiasm at the meeting of the London chamber of commerce, yesterday, Admiral Lord Charles Beresford demanded that vigorous measures be taken to regain the naval supremacy of England, and outlined a plan of naval expansion which he said he had submitted to the admiralty, and which contemplates the building of ten Dreadnaughts before March 21, 1914, in addition to the four provisional ships already provided for, and the practical doubling of the immense sea force of Britain.

Lord Beresford began his address by saying that vigorous measures were necessary and that despite the grave warnings of Premier Asquith and Secretary Grey nothing has yet been done to allay the manifest anxiety of the public over the threatened eclipse of Britain as the "ruler of the sea."

"The situation is much more serious than is generally known," said Lord Beresford, "but there is no necessity for precipitating a panic."

A Mighty Program.

Lord Beresford, then proceeded to outline his scheme of naval expansions, which includes ten Dreadnaughts in addition to those provided for provisionally this year, sixteen second-class cruisers, eighteen commerce protecting cruisers, twenty-four ships of a new type, similar to destroyers, but built on a larger scale, four floating docks for the building and repairing of the larger class of battleships, particularly the Dreadnaughts, the renewal of every foreign repair, coaling station and naval garrison. The establishment of a new system of ammunition stores throughout British territory and the enrollment of 16,000 additional men in the navy for the manning of the proposed new vessels and naval stations.

All of this, Lord Beresford estimates would cost in the neighborhood of $275,000,000 or $300,000,000.

Many Destroyers.

Lord Beresford also advocated the immediate construction of fifty-two destroyers to guard the trade routes of the empire. He attacked vigorously the withdrawal of the cruisers from the trade routes by the present navy organization, saying that the commerce of Great Britain was left practically defenseless by that action.

At the conclusion of Lord Beresford's address the meeting, which was attended by the most influential merchants, and business men of the country, adopted a resolution advising that the chambers of commerce throughout the empire, cooperate for the advancement of the doctrine of naval efficiency.

Takes Away Breath.

The scope of this plan takes away the breath of those who have been advocating the policy of conservatism in naval affairs and has been received with wild enthusiasm by the large following of Lord Beresford, who have been agitating for naval expansion. No intimation has been given by the admiralty heretofore of the plan proposed by Lord Beresford, and it is generally understood that it has met with little favor there.

Public opinion, however, is much wrough up by the naval question, and many of the hitherto "safe and sane" element now support Lord Beresford and his adherents. The announcement by Lord Beresford of this gigantic proposal has caused a great public sensation, and is expected to turn public opinion toward a huge navy, even more than any of the agitation during the past year.

BUSINESS IS SLOWLY BUT SURELY REVIVING

That's the View of Philanthropist Alfred Moseley,

SPEAKING OF TRADE IN UNITED STATES

Holds That Americans Do Not Understand the Position of Great Britain in Matter of Naval Armament—Claims That Germany Is Responsible for Situation.

London, June 30.—Alfred Moseley, the noted English philanthropist, educator and economist, who has just returned from New York where he attended the sessions of the International Arbitration conference, writing in the Evening Standard, Tuesday, declares that Americans fail utterly to understand that it is Germany that refuses to come to satisfactory terms with England, looking to the reduction and final elimination of arguments. He says that American people think the fault lies at the door of the English and that the two-power standard maintained by England is responsible for the increase in the German navy.

Moseley especially denounces in his article Herr Harden's plan for a settlement of the differences between England and Germany, declaring that Harden's plan contemplates the mere piratical division of the plunder. Speaking of the Harden plan, he says:

"Apparently Germany offers England a free hand in the Congo, in exchange for which it wants England to grant Germany liberty to treat Denmark and Holland as Austria has treated Bosnia and Herzegovina. Americans should be made acquainted with this situation at once."

Speaking of business conditions in America from an Englishman's viewpoint, Moseley says:

"American business is slowly, but surely, reviving, and the only bar to further prosperity is the uncertainty over the outcome of the tariff revision. I do not believe there will be any revision that will ever allow European manufacturers to compete in America with American manufactures on their own basis. When the tariff is settled in America, I believe that country is ready for another outburst of prosperity."

DISSOLVING MERGER OF OHIO RAILROADS

Necessitates Changes in Official Directory of Four Lines.

HOCKING VALLEY AND THE OHIO CENTRAL

To Be Separately Operated—Changes Effective Thursday—Report Again Current That N. & W. May Acquire Sandusky Division of the Pennsylvania—Other Notes.

In order to comply as far as possible at present with the order of the circuit court of Franklin county in ordering a complete separation of the Hocking Valley, the Toledo and Ohio Central, the Zanesville and Western and the Kanawha and Michigan railways, the boards of directors of these properties have effected practically a complete reorganization of the executive, operating and traffic departments of these roads, and hereafter the Hocking Valley and the Toledo and Ohio Central will be operated as entirely independent lines and properties.

Headquarters of the Toledo and Ohio Central and Zanesville and Western will be at Toledo; headquarters of the Hocking Valley and Kanawha and Michigan will be in Columbus. As there has been no question raised as to the right of the Toledo and Ohio Central to operate the Zanesville and Western, that road will be under jurisdiction of the former, and as the suit for separation of the Hocking Valley and Kanawha and Michigan has yet to be determined by the court upon a rehearing, they will continue to be jointly operated.

Orders placing the new regime in effect were issued by the officers of both roads Tuesday. N. Monsarrat of Columbus retires as president of the Toledo and Ohio Central and the Zanesville and Western and is succeeded by Charles T. Lewis of Toledo, Mr. Monsarrat remaining as executive head of the Hocking Valley and Kanawha and Michigan. Other Toledo and Ohio Central and Zanesville and Western officials are as follows: Charles G. Hickox of Cleveland, vice president; Hudsen Fitch, of Toledo, traffic manager; J. Landgraf of Toledo, auditor; L. D. Kelley of Toledo, treasurer; H. A. Cooper, purchasing agent; Harry E. Speaks, formerly superintendent of the Hocking Valley, general superintendent; S. S. Stiffey, formerly general superintendent of motive power of the four roads, superintendent of motive power.

Notices issued by the Kanawha and Michigan regarding its new officers are as follows: Decatur Axtell of New York, chairman of the board; N. Monsarrat, Columbus, president; Ralph Hickox, Cleveland, first vice president; James H. Hoyt of Cleveland, second vice president and general counsel; W. N. Cott of Columbus secretary; L. P. Ecker, Columbus, auditor; W. N. Cott, treasurer. W. H. Fisher of Columbus is appointed general passenger agent, vice Moulton Houck, resigned; H. Q. Easson, general freight agent, vice E. L. Jamison, resigned; H. E. Rittenhouse, trainmaster, main line; W. W. Houston, trainmaster, Dickinson district; A. N. Lyon, acting superintendent, vice Thomas M. Connors resigned.

All of the Hocking Valley officers remain as at present with the exception of the transfer of S. S. Stiffey to the Toledo and Ohio Central and the abolition of the office of general superintendent of motive power, J. G. De Vilbiss taking the position of superintendent of motive power, and the appointment of Mr. Speaks as general superintendent of the Toledo and Ohio Central, his place as superintendent of the Hocking Valley being taken by Thomas S. Connors.

The offices of the Zanesville and Western will be removed to Toledo and all of the officers of the Kanawha and Michigan will be removed from Toledo to Columbus. All car mileage and per diem reports will be made to Thomas R. Limer, superintendent of car service, and all car repair bills will be sent to J. G. DeVilbiss, superintendent of motive power. All appointments and changes in headquarters took effect July 1.

Officers of the companies say that they are attempting as nearly as possible under present conditions to comply with the orders of the court, and that after July 1 not an executive, operating or traffic official connected with the Hocking Valley will have any connection with the Toledo and Ohio Central or the Zanesville and Western.

Erie Detective Jerome Hostetter had quite an experience Tuesday afternoon with a couple of train riders who had imbided a little freely of fire-water. As he went to them to arrest them, they threatened to fight. After a little struggle Hostetter got the best of the men and brought them up town. They were taken before Squire Gompf Wednesday, and pleaded guilty to the charges of train riding and resisting an officer. They were fined a dollar and costs and remanded to jail until the fine was paid.

A special telegram from Sandusky says: "The rumor that the Norfolk & Western is seeking the Columbus, Sandusky & Hocking, a Pennsylvania possession, in order to get a lake terminus here for coal from the fields along its lines in southern Ohio, West Virginia and Tennessee, was strengthened today by the presence here of General Superintendent George Johnson and a number of other officials. They would make no statements, although Johnson admitted that L. E. Johnson, president of the Norfolk & Western, might have something to say in a few days."

ORA BALDINGER WINS FIRST HONOR

Former Star Carrier Is First Captain at the V. M. I.

A former Star newsboy has landed the first captaincy of the Virginia Military Institute, and won it on his merits, in making his own way through college. Ora M. Baldinger is announced to be the third ranking distinguished junior at this famed military college and his high standing and military efficiency have combined to win him the first captaincy for the senior year. The distinction is both notable and highly creditable, because the Virginia Military Institute is the West Point of the South, and one of the most aristocratic educational institutions in all the land.

Ora M. Baldinger—his chums here all called him "Red"—began his climb as a Star newsboy, and early showed the metal that is in him. Later on he was a page in the Ohio senate, and there began to lay aside the savings on which he began his college studies. He has made his own way, which agreeably emphasizes the honor he has won. The Star is proud of him.

ARE MAKING PLANS FOR HARNESS EVENTS

Lima Driving Park Company Will Give Usual Meet.

The Star is in receipt of the advance notices of the Lima Driving Park company's July meeting. Because of the new feature of early nominations, Lima will secure more entries than ever before for its July open classes. Horsemen were given the right to name entries as early as March and more than one hundred did so. Others came in at the May period and there will be the largest fields ever known there. The board of directors has again thrown open the gates free to all ladies.

Sometime ago reasonable proof as to the existence of coal within the territory of Uruguay having been furnished, the government, after a careful inquiry, voted 25,000 pesos, $25,850, to further the private investigations being made and pledged valuable mining concessions as well.

If a man spent half as much money in an effort to keep out of trouble as he does in trying to get out, he would be away ahead of the game.

It's better to have spent and gone into debt for it than never to have any fun at all.

It's an easy matter to get married on a salary of $6 a week, but staying married on it is another proposition.

JEWEL STUDDED MANTEL IN HOME

Feature of a Los Angeles Residence Which Costs $8,000—It Is Unique.

Studded with precious stones, a mantel in the new home of George W. Haight at Los Angeles gives to the residence the distinction of being the only one of its kind in the world. The stones range from the costly diamond to the comparatively cheap turquoise and are valued at about $8,000. In all there are 4,500 of them.

Mr. Haight has been planning his home for several years. He wanted it to be unique and has succeeded. Acting as his own architect, he has a dwelling unlike any to be found in Los Angeles, but it is to the mantel that has been given the most of his time. Without the jewels it would be considered a sight worth seeing, but with the hundreds of gems dazzling from their beds of cement which hold them in place it is a picture that can scarcely be realized.

Included in the jewel array are diamonds, garnets, amethysts, bloodstones, emeralds, agates, pearls, rubies, sardonyx, sapphires, opals, topaz, turquoise and scores of other specimens.

A Los Angeles jeweler gathered the stones, being two years in making the collection. The mantel is made of clinker bricks, being nine feet high and seven feet wide. The fireplace is arched with bricks that were melted together in the kiln, the effect being very pretty.

Each brick in the mantel contains not less than half a dozen of the precious stones, and the mantelpiece, which is made of cement, contains the diamonds. Another feature of the mantel is the hearthstone. Where brass tacks are usually found Mr. Haight has opal heads for the tacks. Just how he is going to keep people from crushing or otherwise marring their beauty Mr. Haight does not know, but says the stones will shine so brightly that he does not expect any one to wander on to them.

That the stones will appeal to the unscrupulous was shown the first night that the house was left unoccupied. One hundred and eighty stones had been cemented to the bricks, and the following morning not one of them was to be found. Since that time Mr. Haight has had two guards in the house day and night.

In the near future Mr. Haight will formally open his home with a big reception. To each guest he will give his birthstone as a souvenir of the event. Already his friends are trying to twist the month of their birth to April, which carries with it the diamond, the most coveted of all stones.

IS IT WORTH WHILE?

When one recalls the means whereby the late Jay Gould amassed the enormous fortune which his heirs are now spending, the question naturally arises, Was it worth while? Jay Gould was heartily disliked. His financiering methods were condemned so generally that no one of those outside the circle of his immediate friends ever rose up to defend him.

What the ultimate disposition of the Gould fortune may be, no one can tell. Despite the large slices which were lavished on Count Castellane, its size today is such that if its founder could behold it he would stare open-mouthed in surprise.

What would he think of his name ennobled by scions of the French aristocracy, we wonder? Did he ever foresee, or even dream of the fame acquired by the name of Gould?

More likely he thought his fortune would be guarded with that skilled husbandry manifested by himself, and manifested also by his eldest son and others of his family. It is hardly probable that he entertained a thought of supplying amusement and instruction to the American people, amusement and instruction such as was afforded the world at Paris some time ago and of which New York is now the theater.

Was it worth while to roll up millions for this purpose? Would any man amass money if he saw such a use would be made of it?

Perhaps the public receives some compensation by way of entertainment. But the entertainment, if there be any, is dearly paid for, even if we now know what are the habits of certain New York rich folks, and what are their favorite intoxicating drinks.—Boston Globe.

MINIATURE MODEL FARM EXHIBITION

Contribution of the University of California to the Big Exposition.

Showing the latest and best methods of irrigation worked out by the government experts for various soils and for everything from an orange orchard to a field of beets or alfalfa, a model farm has been constructed ten feet square in the agricultural building at the University of California in Berkeley, Cal.

The farm occupies a prominent place at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition at Seattle, Wash., and is one of the most unique and instructive exhibits. Built on a scale of one-fiftieth of the actual size, it represents a farm of about six acres. Every approved irrigation method used in the United States is represented, and the ditches, gates, dams, zigzag and straight basins in orchard irrigation, tube furrows and other parts are constructed as in the actual work down to the smallest details. Half of the area is planted with miniature trees, and the whole shows at a glance the various improvements and inventions in one of the most important branches of government experimentation.

F. W. Roodling, recently appointed head of the Berkeley station for irrigation investigation under the United States department of agriculture as an expert for the coast, planned the farm. The actual work of construction was done under his direction by E. J. Hoff, United States expert in the work of constructing irrigation machinery and devices.

Irrigation methods for different soils and land contours are indicated on the model farm. One and one-half acres are in orchard, represented by miniature trees and showing zigzag and straight basins as well as open cut and tube furrow methods. Another section represents alfalfa in rectangular, contour and border checks, while on the balance methods of irrigation for summer crops are shown. Ditches are laid out to supply the various sections, and twenty types of miniature ditch structures made of brass can be seen. The latter include various measuring boxes to illustrate methods practiced in ascertaining quantities of water delivered. All is constructed to scale and gives an exact representation of what the actual field would look like.

The exhibit also includes ten models of homemade implements (one-sixteenth natural size), which are used in the various sections of the irrigated west to level and prepare the land to receive water as well as instruments used by this branch of the government service in the course of its investigations.—San Francisco Chronicle.

ALL HAVE EQUAL CHANCE FOR HAPPINESS

Harvard's Ex-President Gives a Class of Missouri Graduates a Talk.

Charles W. Eliot former president of Harvard university, who delivered the principal address at the commencement exercises of the University of Missouri the other day, said in part:

"The most valuable element in a feasible equality is equality before the law and all agents of the law, and this element is precious just because it tends to make the pursuit of happiness free and secure. The American democracy, which should make the pursuit of happiness free and secure to all, is far from having accomplished this result.

"It can do so, however, without seeking to establish among men a monotonous, tiresome and unnatural equality, for happiness is fortunately a state of mind quite independent of condition as regards wealth or the habitual occupation and of mental gifts. It is a product of health, serviceableness, loyalty, security, amiability and a good standing among one's fellows.

"In a democracy all sorts and conditions of men should be equally free and secure in the pursuit of such happiness, but all experience proves that the humble, quiet, wholesome people whose simple, dutiful lives will not long be remembered have as good a chance as anybody to win it."

JAPANESE IN HAWAII.

The Japanese incident in Hawaii could easily make some trouble for the United States. About 9,000 Japanese laborers on sugar plantations in the islands struck, and the disorder which ensued resulted in the indictment of seventeen of their leaders. Because they used incendiary language, the editor of the Jiji, a Japanese paper in Honolulu, was arrested, his office was raided by the sheriff, and members of the editorial staffs of other Japanese publications in that town have been brought before the grand jury. The matter has been reported to the foreign office at Tokio, and an international incident has arisen.

It must be remembered that the Japanese are the dominant industrial element in Hawaii. Out of a population of 154,000 in 1900, two-thirds were Orientals, and this proportion has greatly increased in the past nine *years. The population in 1909 is es*timated at about 175,000, and the increase since 1900 has been among the Japanese almost entirely. The native Hawaiians are decreasing steadily. The white people in the islands number less than 15,000, and these include Americans, English, Germans and others. The Portuguese inhabitants, who number about 20,000, are not classed as whites by the rest of the Caucasian element. They are placed on a lower level than the Chinese. There are 75,000 Japanese in the islands, 65,000 of whom are males, and 10,000 or 15,000 of whom were soldiers either in the war of 1894-95 against China or in that of 1904-05 against Russia, or in both conflicts.

Manifestly a people as clannish as the Japanese are, and who form the dominant element in a mixed community, as they do in the islands of the Hawaiian group, can make a good deal of trouble for the authorities. In recent years, especially since the end of the war with Russia, the Japanese in the islands have been aggressive to a degree which has given offense to the Chinese laborers as well as to the whites. Their newspapers in the islands have been using language which was calculated to disturb the peace, and get some attention from Washington. The affair will need to be handled with intelligence and tact. The laws, however, must be enforced, and offenders of all sorts must be dealt with impartially but firmly and courageously. It is unfortunate for the United States that the Orientals are so far in the majority in Hawaii, but the conditions there appear to offer very little attractions for white men of any nationality.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

It's a shame the way some young widows break into the game again and don't give the girls a chance.

THE STAGE MOUNT OF MAUDE ADAMS

How the Actress Coaches Her Horse for His Part in "Joan of Arc."

Any morning these days if you happened to drop into the Central Park Riding academy at New York between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock in the morning—which, however, without credentials you would not be allowed to do—you might see Miss Maude Adams, the actress, in the strangest sort of costume mounted on a beautiful white horse which she rides around the ring. To the horse are fastened all sorts of metal objects, which jangle as he canters, and grooms throw colored banners and flags into his face until the performance takes on the aspect of a bullfight. Noises are also playing a part in this horse's education, and he is being treated to all sorts of strange sounds from various instruments.

The reason for all this is that the horse is the steed which Miss Adams is to use in her performance of Schiller's "Joan of Arc" in the Harvard stadium at Cambridge, Mass., on June 22. When the horse, a beautiful white Arabian animal, was selected Miss Adams decided to undertake his training all herself. She wanted him to be*come accustomed to her and to know* her.

In the Schiller drama the horse plays an important part. In fact, Miss Adams will be on his back or dismounting or mounting throughout four acts. In the battle scene she gallops at full speed across the stadium. Consequently it is necessary that the horse should know how to behave, even in the face of Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony, which is to be played piecemeal through the performance.

Now, Miss Adams knows that you may ride a horse for several weeks and imagine you have trained him not to be afraid of anything when he will discover some bit of paper in the road which will throw him into spasms of terror. And she doesn't want anything of that sort to happen on the evening of the play.

So every morning she goes to the riding academy. A mediaeval saddle, several inches higher than the modern one, is put on the horse, which she then mounts. Miss Adams' costume is not the one she will use in Cambridge. It consists of divided skirts, to which pieces of metal are fastened and which will serve to accustom the horse to the real suit of armor she will don later. The banners of various colors are waved in the horse's face so that he may not suddenly become frightened at the battle scene.

After all this has been gone through with for an hour or so Miss Adams takes the horse back to the park, having garbed herself more conventionally, and rides him for an hour, occasionally feeding him lumps of sugar, and already the horse is becoming extremely tractable under her training.

Miss Adams will continue her rehearsals with her horse until June 16, when she leaves for Boston to begin general rehearsals of the Schiller play.

A NEW CONSULAR SERVICE SYSTEM

A Card Service To Advance the Interests of American Commerce.

American consuls all over the world are to be supplied with a card index system of catalogues and literature of every manufacturing concern in the United States as a result of an agreement reached the other day between the state department and the department of commerce and labor, says a Washington dispatch. The arrangement is in line with the administration's policy of placing the commerce of the United States in the first rank through a reorganization of the consular service. The service recently was shaken up, and now the administration is preparing to furnish the new men the necessary material with which to produce results.

American consulates receive annually many queries as to manufacturers in various lines. The usual course in such cases is to pass the inquiry on to Washington, which in turn advertises it to the trade and thus gives any manufacturer interested an opportunity to correspond. But this method has been found to involve so much time that the buyer in numerous instances has purchased elsewhere before he gets information about American goods.

William Harper, who evolved this plan, was chief of the bureau of information of the Philadelphia museums for six years following its organization in 1894 and in that capacity visited virtually all of the American consulates in the world in the course of the years 1898-9.

One of the conditions of the service is that it is free to any and all manufacturers in the country. No fee is to be charged for the service in sending out cards to the consulates. All that is required of the manufacturer is that he print his cards in the language of the country to which they are sent and in a prescribed and uniform size for assembling.

DID LEON LING END OWN LIFE?

Chinaman's Body Found Floating In Hudson River.

IDENTIFICATION IS DIFFICULT

New York Police Believe That Measurements Will Reveal Fact That Mystery Surrounding Disappearance of Elsie Sigel's Murderer Has Been Cleared—Grewsome Find Is Made by Resident of Harlem While Motoring With Young Woman.

New York, July 2.—The almost nude body of a Chinaman was found floating in the Hudson river, opposite Harlem, and as far as identification is possible the police are of the opinion that it is the body of Leon Ling, or William L. Leon, the murderer of Elsie Sigel.

The man's height, weight and general appearance tallies with that of Leon Ling, but as the body was nude except for a silk undershirt, and had been in the water for more than a week, a thorough examination will be necessary

Coroner McDonald, who was the first to inspect the body, believes that it is Leon, as do a number of policemen, but until measurements and facial characteristics are carefully gone over the identification will remain in doubt.

If it is Leon the cause of his death will be another mystery, although the theory of suicide would appear reasonable.

The body was discovered by Clinton W. Bell, a resident of Harlem, who was out on the river in a motor boat with a young woman. Bell secured the body, then communicated with the police. Officers were immediately dispatched to the scene and the body was taken to the morgue.

The head of one child was blown off, another was burned to death and four others were so badly injured that it is feared they may not recover.

Officials of the American company also allege that the Demmler plant started in full with about 1,000 men, and that the South Side plant started today with 750 men. These plants have been idle for some time.

FIVE CREWS ON EDGE FOR RACE

All Ready For the Intercollegiate Contest.

SYRACUSE MEN CONFIDFNT

Believe Orange Oarsmen Can Repeat Last Year's Victory—Wisconsin, as Usual, Considered Formidable—Columbia's Chances Hurt by Changes In Shell, While Cornell's Have Been Brightened by Good Work—Large Crowd at Poughkeepsie.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 2.—"Can Syracuse repeat her winning performance of last year?" seems to be the question uppermost in the minds of the crowd drawn here today by the intercollegiate rowing race between Syracuse, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Cornell and Columbia.

According to boys from Syracuse college, who have gathered here in large numbers to see their men row, there isn't the least doubt about their ability to do so. A group of Syracusans is parading the streets of the city loudly proclaiming, in a parody of the old British song, "We want to win again, by jingo— yes, we do; we've got the men, we've got the boat, we've got the coacher, too."

There seems to be considerable basis for the Syracusans' confidence in their oarsmen Not only have they the prestige of last year's victory to spur them on, but they have a mighty good crew to try again for the intercollegiate honors. Most of the men have sat in winning boats of one sort of another, and from all appearances there will be no collapse in the orange shell. In addition, they have had the most careful coaching possible at the hands of Coach James H. Ten Eyck, a member of the family that has made much rowing history. The Syracuse men are especially anxious to beat the Wisconsin crew, who are coached by Ned Ten Eyck, son of their own trainer. To add to the rivalry between the two crews, Syracuse's stroke is another son of the Wisconsin coach.

Wisconsin the "Dark Horse."

Probably the "dark horse" in today's race is Wisconsin, always considered a formidable contender for intercollegiate honors in rowing, despite the fact that it has never come out better than second. The western college has a large undergraduate body to draw upon—this year there are over 5,000 students enrolled at Madison—and Ten Eyck brought here a squad of twenty-five husky, able looking oarsmen, who have been rowing well together and have shown signs of individual skill and strength. The men have the added incentive of trying to retrieve their bad defeat of last year, when the man at No. 2 collapsed and the crew finished last. There is a small but enthusiastic bunch of Wisconsin men here with plethoric wads of money to bet on their crew.

It must be admitted frankly that Columbia does not look good today to the rowing expert. There have been too many changes in the crew to develop the best there is in the men. They will row their best, of course, and they have their splendid finish as second last year to bear them up, but even candid Columbia men have been heard to admit that a victory for the blue and white today will be a big surprise.

Cornell and Pennsylvania.

In Cornell's favor are the splendid way in which the men have been rowing together in practice and the long list of carnelian and white victories. This year's crew is light, however, and doubts are expressed that the men can stand the strain. This year's squad has been very small, and Coach Courtney has had but ten men from whom to pick his final crew.

Pennsylvania has not won a race here since 1900, when the first of the intercollegiate races was rowed, and she does not seem due for another victory. Only a small squad came up from the Schuylkill, and Coach Ward has been quoted to the effect that his combination is not a strong one. He was handicapped in developing his men by poor weather last spring, and, in addition, they have been here only since June 20, giving them but a short time to train on the course.

CRIMSON DEFEATS BLUE

Harvard Easily Wins From Yale In Eight-Oar Race.

New London, Conn., July 2.—Harvard and her crimson blades swept Yale to defeat in three struggles on the Thames river, in the annual regatta between the two universities. The varsity eight-oared event was a magnificent struggle from start to finish. This is the first time since 1882 that Harvard has had two consecutive victories, and probably it will be ascribed to the adoption of a definite rowing policy.

Yale's defeat was not due to any mishap, but simply the result of her antagonist being just a little better, a trifle more powerful, a little better off in reserve strength at the trying point which came after the three miles. In this regatta, counting minor events, Harvard had six victories over crews wearing Yale blue.

PUT AEROPLANE THROUGH PACES

Orville Wright Makes Three Successful Flights.

REMAINS IN AIR TEN MINUTES

Big Crowd Cheers as Dayton Aviator Sails Through Air Over Fort Myer Drill Ground—On Last Trial Machine Is Driven Around Enclosure Nine and One-Half Times and Attains a Height of Forty Feet at Times.

Washington, July 2.—In the presence of cheering thousands Orville Wright demonstrated what pluck and perseverance will do in the way of conquering a balky aeroplane. He made three successful flights around the drill grounds, remaining in the air longer and ascending to a greater height at each successive flight.

After the apparently unsuccessful attempts of the past two days the performances of the flying machine were inspiring. While the machine oscillated at certain points in its flight and dipped and rose suddenly at other points, it was evident from the regularity with which these things happened that they were due to the condition of the atmosphere and not to any fault of the machine.

The first flight consisted of six turns around the drill ground and was completed in exactly five minutes, the height attained being 15 to 20 feet.

On the second flight Orville made nine rounds of the field in a few seconds less than eight minutes, rising considerably higher than on the first effort.

Last Flight Best.

In his last attempt he remained aloft for a few seconds more than nine minutes, and encircled the field nine and a half times. For one complete round he flew very close to the ground, evidently preparing to land. This he did within 200 feet of the aeroplane shed: During this last flight he went higher than on his previous trials, reaching a height of 40 feet. Just before making his landing the left wing scraped the ground and raised a cloud of dust, but Mr. Wright continued to fly half way around the field before decending at the point he had previously decided upon for a lighting place.

Orville hastened to the shed and Wilbur acted as spokesman. He said the flights were very satisfactory to them, although they would make a number of additional preliminary flights before essaying the official tests.

"Are you satisfied with the showing?" Mr Wright was asked by a bystander. "If we couldn't do any better, I would say that I was very well satisfied," was his confident reply. "We didn't make any changes in the motor for the trial," he continued. "We only advanced the spark somewhat. We are not using the full power that our motor is capable of developing."

INDICT TRUST DIRECTORS

Government Wins First Round of Fight With Sugar Refiners.

New York, July 2.—As the result of its action in closing down the plant of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company, after loaning $1,250,000 to one of its directors and taking a controlling interest in the refinery as collateral, the American Sugar Refining company, six of its directors and two other individuals were indicted by the federal grand jury on 14 counts on a charge of conspiracy in restraint of trade.

The penalty for this offense is a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than one year or both, in case of individuals, and a fine of not more than $5,000 in the case of a corporation.

The individuals indicted are Washington B. Thomas president of the American Sugar Refining company; Arthur Donner, Charles Senff and John E. Parsons, all of New York, and John Mayer of Morristown, N. J., and George Frazier of Philadelphia, all directors in the company. Indictments were also returned against Gustav Kissel and Thomas B. Harnett, counsel for Adolph Segel of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company, who secured the loan from the sugar trust.

FRED WARREN SENTENCED

Publisher of Appeal to Reason Must Go to Jail and Pay Fine.

Fort Scott, Kan., July 2.—Fred Warren, business manager of the Appeal to Reason, a Socialist paper published at Girard, Kan., was sentenced to six months in jail and a fine of $1,500 by Judge Pollock in the federal court. Several years ago Warren was arrested for alleged violation of the postal regulations in sending through the mails a printed offer of a reward of $1,000 to any one who would kidnap ex-Governor William S. Taylor of Kentucky and return him to that state.

A motion for a new trial was overruled. An appeal will be taken. The Socialists of the country have pledged $35,000 to support Warren in his defense.

GETS ABSOLUTE DIVORCE

Ohio Girl Objects to Persian Husband's Harem.

Cleveland, O., June 2.—An absolute divorce was granted to Mrs. Carmen Shlemon from Isaac D. Shlemon of Urmi, Persia. Before her marriage to the Persian ten years ago Mrs. Shlemon was Miss Carmen Perfect, daughter of a wealthy resident of Lancaster, O.

Shlemon, a traveling rug salesman, visited Lancaster, met Miss Perfect, and after a brief courtship married her. They traveled over the country selling rugs and working for the support of missions in Persia.

In 1904 they went to Persia and located in Urmi, where she was compelled by her husband to adopt the veil of the Persian women and conform to other customs of the country. She complied with his demands until he insisted upon establishing a harem in their home. Then she rebelled and made her escape. Two years ago she reached Cleveland.

KILLS TWO MEN AT POLITICAL MEETING

Indian Student Gives No Reason For London Crime.

London, July 2.—A startling double assassination, of a political character, occurred towards the conclusion of a public gathering at the Imperial institute. An Indian student, whose name is not known, shot and killed Lieutenant Colonel Sir William Hutt Curzon Wyllie and Dr. Calas Lalcaca of Shanghai.

Lady Wylie was in attendance at the gathering. Following the shooting she passed the spot where her husband had fallen and stopped to remark, "Poor fellow." She then knelt down and as she looked closely at the disfigured face a look of horror leaped into her eyes and she exclaimed: "It is my husband; why wasn't I with him?"

The assassin made an ineffectual effort to end his own life, but was overpowered and placed in confinement. There is no motive assigned for the crime.

QUAKE VISITS RUINS

Terror-Stricken People Flee From Messina and Reggio.

Messina, July 2.—People here and at Reggio were thrown into a panic when the walls of houses not completely demolished in the visitation of December were shaken down by a severe earthquake shock. They fled to the open country in droves. One woman was caught under a falling wall and killed.

It is said that this quake was of greater severity than the fatal one of the night of Dec. 28. The wooden houses and huts erected for the accommodation of the people seemed to be thrown from side to side. Eight shocks were felt here.

DOUBT CASHIER'S STORY

Grand Jury Indicts Man Who Told of Sensational Robbery.

Fort Worth, Tex., July 2.—Walter King, cashier of the branch bank of the Wagoner Bank and Trust company, which was robbed of $8,100 by a lone robber several days ago, according to the statement of King, was indicted for embezzlement.

King was arrested and later released on bond in the sum of $5,000.

Shots Arouse Mayor Busse.

Chicago, July 2.—Mayor Busse was aroused from a sound sleep by what was supposed to be revolver shots fired near Mercy hospital, where he is confined as the result of an operation for appendicitis. Dr. John Golden said he believed the noises were intended to bother Mr. Busse.

SQUALLS AHEAD FOR TAX BILLS

Senators Do Not Enthuse Over Taft's Pet Measure.

DEBATE IS ALMOST EXHAUSTED

Final Action on Propositions May Be Postponed Until Next Session. Senator Bulkeley's Previous Engagement With President Prevents Adoption of Flint's Motion to Take Vote Tuesday—Senator Root Takes Floor Against Income Tax.

Washington, July 2. — It becomes more plainly evident every day that the corporation tax question has failed to arouse as much interest in the senate as expected, and suggestions were heard in support of a proposition looking to postponement of the entire income tax question, including corporation tax and inheritance tax, until next session. The fact that the president is strongly urging the tax on corporations stood in the way of the acceptance of any suggestion of this kind, and it was not seriously urged.

No little feeling was aroused over the action of Senator Bulkeley in blocking the proposition to vote on the income tax amendment to the tariff bill, including the corporation tax substitute, next Tuesday. The proposition took the form of a request from Senator Flint, in the absence of Senator Aldrich, in charge of the tariff bill, for unanimous consent to vote on the Bailey-Cummins income tax amendment and all of the amendments to the amendment at 12 o'clock next Tuesday, with the understanding that the senate should remain in session until all these questions should be disposed of.

Senators Eager to Talk.

A number of senators asked to be heard, and the proceeding for a brief time took on the appearance of a general conversation at a sewing bee. One senator after another expressed his consent to the proposition until for a few moments it looked as if all objections would be brushed away and all factions satisfied. Just as the vice president was stating the agreement for about the third time, Mr. Bulkeley loomed up and proceeded to say that he could not agree that the vote should be taken at the time specified. He did not then give his reasons, and he was immediately beset by a dozen or more senators in the hope of prevailing upon him to desist from his opposition. It turned out that while he was opposed to the corporation tax amendment, this was not his real reason, but that he expected to be absent from the city next Tuesday and did not want the vote recorded while he was away. It seems that some of Mr. Bulkeley's constituents are very strongly opposed to the corporation provision and, sharing in their feeling, he desires to make as strong fight as possible against it. He therefore desires to be on hand up to the last moment, and in view of the fact that he expects to be in Connecticut with the president next Tuesday, he found it quite impossible to give his attention to the amendment on that day.

It was evident when Senator Flint made his proposition that the discussion of the income tax question had been almost, if not quite, exhausted. There were several speeches for and against the measure, Mr. Borah leading off in favor of the income tax, but opposed to the corporation tax, and Mr. Root following on the other side and advocating the corporation tax but opposing the income tax.

TYPE OF LIFEBOAT THAT RIGHTS ITSELF

A Power Craft That Refuses To Stay Upside Down. Remarkable Features.

Those who saw the tests of O. R. Ingersoll's self righting and self bailing power boat at Governors island, New York, the other afternoon almost were persuaded to believe being shipwrecked would be a pleasure. Though the craft is large enough to carry fifty persons, after it was turned keel up by means of a derrick on board the steamboat General Johnston, it righted itself in five seconds and bailed itself in twenty-seven seconds. Moreover, its gasoline engine stopped automatically when the boat was keel up. The test was made after the boat made a trip against the tide from Bayonne. Then it was sent darting around the island, displaying speed and ability to turn quickly.

An army officer who saw the test said being in such a boat when it upset would be no more dangerous than taking a bath. There is no danger of the provisions and water casks being lost overboard when the boat turns over, for they are in water tight compartments. The twenty-five horsepower motor is in a water tight inclosure in the stern. The gasoline tank for the motor is in the bow. It will hold twenty-five gallons and a larger tank in the bottom of the boat seventy-five, the total being sufficient to keep the boat going for twenty-five hours.

The craft is of steel, so there is no danger from fire. Between the deck and keel is a series of horizontal air tight tubes in four water tight compartments, so that the boat might be rammed and broken at any point without seriously affecting its ability to keep afloat. There are eight holes through the bottom, each with a peculiarly constructed shutter, which permits water which may be taken aboard to run out, but none to run in.

One of the features which make it available for life saving purposes is its weight. The builders of other boats who attempted to accomplish the same thing made them so heavy they could not be taken on board a ship. Ingersoll's boat is 30 feet 7 inches long, 7 feet 6 inches wide and 3 feet 8 inches deep. It weighs only 5,800 pounds. Small boats launched from a vessel in a storm are often smashed or sunk by overcrowding. It makes no difference how the Ingersoll boat is launched, because it rights itself anyway. It will sustain three times the weight of all the persons who could crowd into it and hang on the gunwales.

Ingersoll's boats, built on the same model, have been used by the quartermaster's department of the army several years. The new feature recently demonstrated was equipping one with power. There was no difficulty about putting a motor in this style of boat, nor was it difficult to store the gasoline where it could not become ignited and explode. The problem was to have the engine stop automatically when the boat was overturned. If it did not stop and the passengers were thrown into the water the craft would leave them in its wake after it had righted itself. Moreover, the rapidly revolving propeller might cut persons struggling in the water to get on board after the upset. The easiest way to overcome the difficulty was to let the water on to the engine, but that would put it out of commission until it could be cleaned and repaired. In the type tested the other day Ingersoll solved the problem.

The test was conducted under the supervision of Major Richard Schofield of the quartermaster's department, aided by Captain William H. Williams, marine expert. With him were Lieutenant Colonel A. Cronkhit, an expert in the artillery corps, and Colonel I. W. Littell and Captain F. A. Grant of the quartermaster's department. They were pleased with the work of the boat and congratulated the inventor, who lives in Wilmington, Del.—New York Press

FINE MEMORIAL TO H. H. ROGERS

Fairhaven Citizens To Erect a Lasting Monument to Their Late Townsman.

An enduring memorial to the late Henry H. Rogers, the Standard Oil man, will be erected by the citizens of Fairhaven, Mass., the town to which Mr. Rogers had been so generous in his benefactions. Just what form the memorial will take has not yet been decided. Opinions differ as to whether it should be a statue of Mr. Rogers or a shaft with a medallion on one side and a bust of Mr. Rogers on the other side.

Another matter that the future must decide is as to the amount of money that will be expended in the erection of the memorial. A quite general expression of opinion is that it will be possible to gather $25,000, this to represent, so far as possible, the contributions of all the residents of the town. The fund will be gathered by popular subscription rather than a town appropriation, though it will be recognized as having the official sanction of the town in the presence of the board of selectmen as members of the committee in charge of erecting the memorial.

YORKSHIRE MILLS' TAILORING BRANCH

Moves Out of City by Night Without Notice to Landlord or Patrons Sends Letters Claiming That All Claims Will Be Met in Full from Cleveland Headquarters

The Yorkshire Woolen Mills company discontinued its agency located in the old Magruder building on south Main street very abruptly Wednesday evening and those in charge of the business left with the stock of goods during the night

The goods were boxed and hauled to the union depot in a buggy They were then expressed to Mansfield where the company conducts an agency The creditors and some of the patrons of the company were very much surprised to find the room empty next morning The room had been leased for two years and A Barton the agent for the owner states that no announcement of an intention to vacate was given him and no arrangements as to meeting the terms of the rent contract were made with him

Creditors of the company received letters from the concern Thursday stating that the business had been discontinued here because of the extreme dullness of trade but that all obligations of the concern will be met in full Those who hold accounts against the company were advised that they can secure their money by presenting their claims to to the Yorkshire Woolen Mills company Superior avenue Cleveland Patrons who have made deposits on suits will receive their suits by express C O D They will be sent with privilege of examination

According to the letters the concern has left but few patrons who have advanced money on suits not delivered The indebtedness of the concern about the city aside from the rent contract will not aggregate a great deal and the creditors are showing no uneasiness as to their money The closing of the business in the manner described has simply served to attract more attention than it would otherwise

POLICE CAPTURE AN ALLEGED BURGLAR

John Ormston, Alias Jack Webb, in Toils of the Law.

LOOT FROM AMICON'S FOUND IN HIS ROOM

Together with Steel Saws, Chloroform and Other Implements of Yeggman's Craft—Other Cases Pending Against Suspect—Masquerading as Peddler—Notes

John Ormston a peddler known here as Jack Webb was arrested Wednesday evening and is now confined in the city prison to answer to a charge of forcing an entrance to the building and safe of the John Amicon company The arrest of Ormston or Webb was the result of some good work on the part of the local police and was made by Officers Bell and McDonough

The suspect has been in the city for about two months during which time he was employed by Wallace Court in peddling provisions of various kinds They kept their horses in the barn at the [illegible] of the Bausinger block, on south Main street Ormston had aroused the suspicion of the local police by remarks he had made to a number of people about shooting peters a yegg term for blowing safes The local officers watched him night and day expecting another job to be pulled off in which they could catch him red handed Whether Ormston suspicioned that he was being watched is not known but he failed to take a chance at the job for which the officers were watching

The barn which Court had rented for his horses was searched and a pint jar of old coins was found hidden in a hole in the west side of the barn A closer watch was kept on Ormston after the safe at the Marion National Mill was blown last week The glass jar of coin found in the barn were identified as those stolen from the safe at the Amicon office they being the property of S M Court The jar contained about 254 pieces mostly old eagle pennies It also contained several of the Columbian half dollars and the old dollar which Court had said were among the coins stolen

Wednesday evening Court filed an application for a warrant to search the room of Ormston in the Moloney block on north Main street Officers Bell and McDonough searched the room and found one Columbian half dollar and an old fifty cent piece which Court had previously described by giving the date of the coin Three steel saws of the kind used to saw steel bars and a two ounce bottle of chloroform were also found in the room

Ormston claimed on being arrested that he came to Marion from Ft Wayne Indiana and that he was a hard working man Court filed an affidavit against him charging him with forcing an entrance to the place and safe of John Amicon & Company on the night of June 11 and he will be arraigned to answer to the charge

Ormston is also believed to be the one who blew the safe at the mill and as being the man who has committed several thefts and hold ups since his residence here

TO MOVE CLOCK HANDS FORWARD

Cincinnati Adopts Her Daylight Ordinance.

IT WILL GO INTO EFFECT NEXT MAY

Queen City People Propose To Arise Earlier.

By Moving the Hands of Their Timepieces Forward and Keeping Them Thus from May 1 to October 1, They Will Add an Hour of Daylight for Work or Recreation as They Desire.

Cincinnati, June 29—If Cincinnatians get up at 6 o'clock next May, it will be in reality what was 5 o'clock on the day before. They will quite work at 5 o'clock just the same, but in reality it will be 4 o'clock, according to the way they are reckoning time now. They will work the same number of hours, but there will be more sunlight from May 1 until Octover 1. They will have their evening meal at what is now 5 o'clock and they will have about three hours of daylight after that, whereas when they finish their evening meal now they have only about two hours before it gets dark.

This is all accomplished by an ordinance passed in council, Monday, which provides that at 2 o'clock in the morning on May 1, 1910, the hands of the clock be turned forward an hour and shall remain so until October 1, when they will be turned back again. Until the whole country adopts the new daylight schedule, however, Cincinnatians will have to figure train schedules according to the present way of computing time. Although clocks in Cincinnati will say that it is 9 o'clock, it will continue to be 8 for the railroads and Cincinnati people have to figure on their departure in that way.

Cincinnati Leads Way.

Cincinnati is the first city in the United States to adopt the new schedule It is thought others will follow until turning the clock forward becomes a national custom. The benefits to be gotten out of "more daylight" according to its advocates are as follows:

Health and physical welfare are promoted if the activities of life begin early in the day, as nature intends Additional time during daylight is gained for rest and recreation, the use of parks and playgrounds during the hot months increased and all forms of recreation projected on larger lines. The farmer, who represents almost one-half of the population, and who practically lives by this summer schedule, is enabled to transact his business with the cities that much earlier. Those employed in mills, factories and offices, and especially the housewive, will have more time at their command during daylight.

The people of England and Scotland enjoy long summer evenings by reason of their northern latitude, and we should have what they have, as it can be done without cost or interference with existing conditions. It affects intimately the private and personal life of every man, woman and child, and is therefore of more personal interest to all the people than the tariff or the Panama canal, or any of the national questions now pending.

CHOLERA SPREADS IN ST. PETERSBURG

Outbreak Among Servants in Home of Premier Stolypin.

St. Petersburg, June 29.—Attention was drawn to the increased spread of cholera today by the discovery of an outbreak of the disease among the servants at the summer home of Premier Stolypin.

Immediately upon the discovery, the entire house was quarantined and the servants isolated from the family of the premier. The spread of the plague throughout the vicinity of St. Petersburg is most alarming and government officials are at work trying to combat the disease.

To Old Wages.

New York, June 29.—On July 1 practically all the independent steel and iron companies that reduced wages when, late in February, the United States Steel corporation declared for an "open market," will have restored wages to the old standards.

FEDERAL ATTORNEY WHO IS PROBING THE SUGAR TRUST

HENRY A. WISE.

The federal grand jury in New York City has taken up the investigation of the American Sugar Refining company, its action being based on the $3,000,000 loan made by the trust to Adolph Segal, of Philadelphia, formerly president of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company. The case is in the hands of United States District Attorney Henry A. Wise, one of the shrewdest and ablest men in the government's legal department. He has recently been in conference with George H. Earle, receiver of the Pennsylvania company, who forced the American company to a settlement with the smaller corporation.

HE WEARIES OF HIS FAILURES

Former Ohio Linguist Ends Life in Mexican City.

DRIVES AIRSHIP AGAINST STORM

Zeppelin I Forced into Mouth of the Wind.

BLOW APPROACHES CLOSE TO A GALE

But the Count Makes Trip of Thirty-Six Miles.

Finally Forced To Land Owing to the Fact That the Work Overburdens His Motors—Will Go On to Metz on the French Frontier, Where He Will Engage in Certain Maneuvers.

Biberach Badeb, Germany, June 29.—After battling for three hours with a storm, Count Zeppelin, who left Friedrichafen late last night for Metz, was forced to land his great airship, "Zippelin I," here for repairs.

Though the air voyage was only thirty-six miles in length, it was under the most difficult conditions, which accounts for the slow progress.

In order to keep his course toward Metz, the count was forced to drive the balloon in a general northwesterly direction and in so doing he encountered adverse winds, at times reaching the velocity of gales. The constant maneuvering and heavy work told on the motors and when he reached this place the aeronaut was forced to descend. After the motors are repaired, he will proceed on his journey, with every prospect of completing the remaining 150 miles without any delay.

The big airship is being taken to Metz for military purposes. Metz is the chief military post on the French frontier and many aerial experiments have been conducted there.

In spite of the fact that the airship was forced to descend here, the voyage of the night is looked upon as a triumph The count, succeeded in holding his course and, though moving comparatively slowly, drove the machine through the storm without losing control for a second,

STREETCAR MEN ARE VICTORIOUS

Strike at Pittsburg Proves of Short Duration.

MAYOR FORCES A SETTLEMENT

He Tells Railway People Feeling of the Public.

Assures Them That the People of Pittsburg Are in No Humor To Submit Tamely to a Prolonged Tie-Up of Traffic Lines and Rioting in the Streets—The Agreement Is Quickly Signed.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 29.—Through the efforts of Mayor William A. Magee, the street railway strike, which cost the city of Pittsburg $200,000 in two days, was officially declared at an end when articles of agreement were signed in his private office by officials of the Pittsburg Railways company and an executive committee from the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes that will for years prevent another tieup of the 400 miles of street railway tracks in and about Greater Pittsburg and Allegheny county.

The strike, it developed, was the outcome of but two points of difference between the car company and the motormen and conductors, one being the alleged neglect upon the part of the car company to shorten "swing runs" and the other of the refusal of these railway officials to reinstate discharged men without proper hearing.

When the warring factions assembled for the final conference the mayor stated what he thought was only the just deserts of the residents of Greater Pittsburg, and suggested that the temper of the people would neither tolerate rioting nor prolonged traffic disturbances.

Mayor Speaks Plainly.

It was only after the mayor had made his sentiments extremely plain that the car company officials and union men finally agreed to settle their differences. With slight modifications an agreement, allowing discharged men proper hearings before superintendents and the assurance of the car company that the secretary will shorten "swing runs" 50 per cent, was drawn up and signed.

Incipient riots broke out in various portions of the city, and a number of shots were exchanged in the vicinity of the car barns, but no one was injured.

Lacrosse Strike Settled.

Lacrosse, Wis., June 29.—After having been settled once and then repudiated by the men, the street railway strike has been finally and positively settled. The men gain all points, except that the company is to operate an open shop.

HER PHYSICAL DEVELOPMENT

Most Perfect of Any Girl Under Seventeen Years.

New York, June 29.—In a contest which embraced all the principal cities of the world, the New York Physical Culture society has awarded Miss Margaret Claire Edwards, of Napa, California, the gold medal for the most perfect physical development of a girl under seventeen years old.

Bernard MacFadden, one of the judges, said today:

"The strength and endurance of this young girl are simply wonderful. She has been reared out of doors and spends a good part of her time riding horseback. She has helped to drill a large class of school children and led the physical culture demonstration and exercises before the Napa county institute for the last two years. She is a marvel, and I am glad that we found the most perfect physical girl in the world here at home."

BRANDENBURG IS NOT GUILTY

Immediately Rearrested on a Charge of Kidnaping.

New York, June 29.—Broughton Brandenburg, magazine writer, charged with grand larceny in getting $500 from the New York Times for what he said was a letter from the late President Cleveland, was found not guilty this afternoon at 2:15 o'clock.

Brandenburg was immediately rearrested on the charge of kidnaping his stepson in St. Louis. He is now under arrest.

SPAIN'S PRETENDER BELIEVED TO BE DYING IN ITALY

DON CARLOS

Don Carlos, the pretender to the Spanish throne, is said to be dying in Varese, Italy. His ailment is cerebral paralysis, and his condition is critical. For years the pretender has been an invalid, but the Carlist organs have continued to deny that his condition was serious. Don Carlos possesses considerable wealth, but lives in retirement.

USE DYNAMITE TO CRACK SAFE

And Wreck Postoffice Building at Leland, Illinois.

ROBBERS GET $5,000 IN WAY OF BOOTY

Explosion Arouses Town and a Hot Battle Ensues.

Three Masked Men Get Away in Automobile, but Not Before One of the Trio Is Injured—Believed To Be the Same Gang Which Has Done Half a Dozen Recent Postoffice Jobs.

Chicago, June 29—Three masked men riding in an automobile today dynamited the safe in the postoffice at Leland, Illinois, and escaped with $5,000 in money and stamps after a fight with citizens. The fact that the men used an automobile leads the authorities to believe they are the same "automobile bandits" who have robbed half a dozen postoffices throughout Illinois recently.

The men drove into town about 2 a. m. and entered the postoffice by a rear window. A heavy charge of dynamite wrecked the postoffice building, arousing the town.

A score of armed citizens attacked the robbers as they were leaving the city. Two bandits stood up in the automobile and fired their revolvers repeatedly without effect. One robber was wounded, but all got away.

NO MORE FLIRTING WITH THE WOMEN

Chinese Secret Societies Have Sent Out Edict.

New York, June 29 The real for sure life business of a John Chinaman in New York is knocking the spots off dirty clothes

There it starts and there it must end. The Chinaman must not gossip with women customer In nearly every Chinese laundry in New York there appears today a large sign, written in Chinese characters. The layman cannot read it, but he would be somewhat shocked if he could. In language far more plain than the characters in which they are written, the Chinese are ordered to let the women alone. The signs were placed about the city by the leading Chinese secret societies, whose members declare the edict will be enforced. The Sigel murder is directly responsible for the warnings. The signs tell the laundrymen that conversation with white women must stop If a woman who comes with her wash is inclined to merry persiflage, the Chinaman must discourage it. The warning says a disobedient Chinaman will be punished by his own people.

All the fun of staying out late at night is lost when there's nobody at home to carry on about it.

The "pen" is mightier than the county jail.

COMMISSIONED TO SLAY CZAR

Adolph Vang, the Assassin of General Beekman,

CONFESSES IN HIS DYING MOMENTS

Kills Beekman To Show Loyalty to the Cause.

Only One of a Series of Assassins Detailed by the Anarchists To Try To Kill the Czar During His European Trip—Police Refuse To Discuss the Confession of Vang, but They Are Alarmed.

Stockholm, Sweeden, June 29.—Although he refused to divulge the names of his co-conspirators, Adolph Vang, the assassin of General Beekman, confessed on his death bed that he had been commissioned by the anarchists to kill the Czar of Russia, and that he was only prevented by his inability to get within striking distance of the Russian sovereign. Vang confessed that he had no personal motive to kill Beekman, but said that he shot the first high official he could reach, in order to convince his anarchistic comrades of his good faith.

The facts were learned today on the best of authority, although the utmost pains have been taken by the Stockholm police to conceal everything bearing on the killing of Beekman and the suicide of his assassin.

Against the Czar.

Vang in his confession is understood to have made the statement that he is only one of a series of assassins detailed by the anarchists to try to kill the Czar during his European trip.

"The Czar cannot escape," it is claimed Vang said. "He and his are watched day and night and at every city he visits, where public functions are held, a comrade will be in waiting to make an attempt to end the tyrant's life."

The police refuse absolutely to discuss the confession of Vang, but no secret is made of the fact that Russian secret service agents have been summoned from St. Petersburg and scattered along the route of the Czar's tour. It has been rumored that the situation may grow so serious that the trip may be abandoned.

COLES IS SECURED BY GEORGE GOULD

As Wireless Operator Aboard His Yacht, Atlanta.

New York, June 29.—George J. Gould will be able to send a real "C. Q. D." message if ever the good Gould yacht, "Atlanta," takes to a lee shore. The Gould yacht left today for an Atlantic trip and aboard the craft was Sam Coles, the wireless operator who stood by the instruments of the sinking "Slavonia" for thirty-six hours when she grounded off Flores island in the Azores.

When Gould heard of Coles' work during the wreck, he immediately arranged with the Marconi company, which employed the operator, to install a wireless equipment on the Atlanta and put Coles in charge. As soon as Coles reached New York, he was hurried to the Gould yacht, and when she left the harbor he was clicking away merrily in the luxurious "wireless" quarters aboard.

WRIT OF ERROR IN THATCHER MATTER

Will Suspend His Disbarment by the Supreme Court.

Columbus, O, June 29.—Under a construction by the attorneys for Charles A. Thatcher, his disbarment by the supreme court last Friday, was suspended today by operation of a writ of error to the supreme court of the United States, allowed by the Ohio supreme court this afternoon.

Attorneys E B King and John J Sullivan, for Thatcher, appeared before the supreme court in chambers this morning and applied for a writ of error.

The writ was allowed this afternoon and the signing of that writ and the filing of a bond is held by Thatcher's attorneys to operate as a suspension of the sentence of disbarment, by provision of the United States statutes, permitting Thatcher to continue in the practice of law until the supreme court has given its decision on review.

HEAD OF TRUST UNDER INQUIRY OF U. S. GRAND JURY

WASHINGTON B. THOMAS

Washington B. Thomas is head of the American Sugar Refining company, which is being investigated by the federal grand jury in New York City. So carefully have the United States authorities proceeded with the probing of the sugar trust that secret service men were detailed to investigate the associations of each member of the jury. The inquiry was ordered by Attorney General Wickersham after the sensational disclosures following the settlement of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company's suit against the trust. The grand jury proceedings are in charge of Henry A. Wise, attorney for the southern district of New York.

Another Chino-American Case.

New York, June 29.—Sun Chann, a short-haired, Americanized Chinese, is named in the suit for divorce filed by Frank B. Paulson, chief clerk in the auditing department of the Mutual Life Insurance company. Sun Chann is a cashier and bookkeeper in an Oriental curio shop in Fifth avenue. COLUMBUS BANK PEOPLE SUFFER

Clever Swindle Is Worked in Capital City.

FIVE BANKS ARE TOUCHED FOR $1,500

Alleged Traveling Salesman Works the Trick.

Deposits $400 and Draws Out $325. Then Deposits Certified Check for $1,250 Against Which He Draws. Investigation Goes to Show That the Certified Check on Long Island Bank Is a Forgery.

Columbus, O., June 29.—The return within the past two weeks of a number of certified checks purporting to have been issued by the Queens County Trust bank, Long Island, New York, and stamped "forgery," proved that a number of Columbus banks had lost probably $1,500 through a clever scheme which was worked in this city on Saturday, June 12.

The losses are said to have been divided among at least five banks. The scheme was worked in many cities over the country about the same time, and Toledo banks are reported to have been hard hit. The game was simple.

About the 1st of June a stranger appeared at the bank and, giving the name of C W. Turner, said he was a travelling salesman selling grinding machines for polishing floors. He was accompanied by "H. E. Moore." Turner deposited $400, but during the next few days checked it all out except $75.

Saturday, June 12, he appeared at the Bank and deposited a certified check of the Queens County Trust bank for $1,250 and drew on it for $400. After the transaction, it occurred to the bankers that it might be shady, but it being Saturday afternoon communication could not be established with the Long Island bank and the suspicions were not verified until some days later. The Pinkertons have been employed on the case by the Ohio Bankers' association.

ZUBER WIELDS HIS LITTLE AX

And Heads of Republicans Fall into Basket.

PLACES THUS MADE FOR THE DEMOCRATS

Who Have Proven Patriots in Harmon Cause.

With the Exception of W. S. Roebuck, of Bellefontaine, and A. Z. Chlopok, of Toledo, Who Are Temporarily Retained, All of the Deputies of Former State Fire Marshal Rogers Are Decapitated.

Columbus, O., June 29.—Chief State Workshop and Factory Inspector Thomas Kearns today began the reorganization of that department of heavy patronage by appointing A. N. McCord, of Cadiz, Democrat, to succeed Colonel E. S. Bryant, of Bloomdale, as inspector of high explosions, a position paying $2,000 per year.

State Fire Marshal John W. Zuber today made the following appointments of deputies in his department:

L. D. Wilford, of Bucyrus, Crawford county, for the district to be composed of Craword, Wyandot, Marion, Morrow and Richland counties. Mr. Wilford is at present county clerk of Crawford county, and his appointment is to become effective August 1. C. H. Thieman, of Minster, Auglaize county, for the district to be composed of Auglaize, Mercer, Shelby, Darke and Miami; to take effect July 1. Edward E. Gilbert, of Newark, Licking county; district to be composed of Licking, Knox, Holmes, Coshocton, Muskingum and Perry; effective July 1. O. L. Hartupee, appointed to be deputy in the Columbus district. Mr. Hartupee was formerly of Knox county, was a deputy in the department under Mr. Creamer, and for the past year assisted in organizing the state fire marshal's department in the state of South Dakota.

To Make Room.

To make room for the Democrats decided upon for the places, Zuber, Monday afternoon, removed the following Republicans from office:

Garret Fox and S. E. Baumgardner, Columbus; Thomas Miller, Cincinnati; Harry T. Brockman, N. A. Burt, Charles P. Cowell, John T. McAnich and Benjamin Killam, Cleveland; Harry B. Kirtland and Walter J. Kountz, Toledo; George W. Caldwell, Waverly; O. B. Hullinger, Springfield; John W. Cusick, Tiltonville; A. C. West, Washington Court House.

This finishes the decapitation of Marshal Rogers' deputies with the exception of W. S. Roebuck, of Bellefontaine, and A. Z. Chlopok, of Toledo, who are retained temporarily.

Andrew Spaeth, district factory inspector for Cincinnati, and John W. Bly, inspector for the Finley district, both Republicans, anticipated the reorganization movement of Thomas P. Kearns, the new chief inspector, by resigning. Their resignations were accepted today.

INTERESTED PARTY WILL FURNISH FUND

To Send Fairest Maid of Bath to Bath Carnival.

Columbus, O., June 29.—So anxious is Bath, England, to be honored by a young lady from each place in the world named Bath at the carnival in that English city next month, that Governor Harmon has renewed the effort to have some young lady represent Bath, Ohio. In the first effort, none were willing to pay their own expenses. Now it is likely that some interested person will furnish the money if the proper beauty is to be found to represent Bath, the Ohio namesake located in Summit county.

DOUBLE DROWNING ENDS AN OUTING

Of Five Hundred Children at Chester Park, Monday.

Cincinnati, June 29.—A double drowning ended an outing of 500 children at Chester park, Monday afternoon. While the little ones were splashing in the water, Oscar Sauer, eleven, was seized with cramps and sank. He was not missed until companions stumbled over his body. An unclaimed suit in the dressing rooms later in the evening caused the lake to be dragged and the body of Oliver Lunkenheimer, nine, was found. He also had been seized with cramps.

BOMB THROWER JOLTS CHICAGO

Buildings Are Wrecked and Several Are Injured.

WINDOWS BROKEN FOR BLOCK AROUND

Another Chapter in the War of the Gamblers.

The Center of the Explosion Is in the Vicinity of Clark and Washington Streets in the Rear of the Central Telephone Exchange, Near the Headquarters of Madden and His Associate Sports.

Chicago, June 28. — An explosion, supposed to have been caused by dynamite, did untold damage in the business district, injuring two or three persons severely and wrecking stores and windows for a block, near Clark and Washington streets.

The exact nature of the explosion remains a riddle because of the great pile of debris thrown around the alley where it occurred. It is probably another in the series of gamblers' war bombs that have mystified the police of this city for two years. Bomb No. 30 in the series wrecked a saloon a few nights ago.

The center of the explosion was in an alley in the rear of the Central Telephone exchange. This exchange was put out of business. Two restaurants facing on Clark street were blown practically into the street, food and dishes being scattered over the car tracks.

In this alley also was the rear entrance to Powers & Gilbert's saloon, a headquarters for Martin B. Madden and his associates in the building trades. Madden and his men are figuring largely in labor disputes and have been the subject of grand jury indictments.

The police estimate of the damage is placed at $100,000. One theory advanced is that 50 electric installers who have been on strike against the Chicago Telephone company, which suffered the greatest damage, may have been behind the deed. Another is that gamblers who have suffered loss through co-operation of the telephone company with the police sought to retaliate.

ORANGEMEN AND CATHOLICS RIOT

Streets of Liverpool Are Scenes of Wildest Disorder.

Liverpool, June 28.—A mysterious rumor circulated early today resulted in a wild riot between Orangemen and Catholics here in which several were seriously injured. For a time a howling, battling mob passed the streets, and the police were forced to violent measures to disperse the rioters. Houses were rifled and a large amount of property destroyed by the lawless element which joined in the fight.

A clanging Protestant church bell was the indirect cause of the outbreak. As the bell rang, it was whispered about that the tolling was a signal for an attack upon Catholics by Orangemen. The rumor brought adherents of both sides from their homes, and in a few moments the streets were filled. Scores were arrested.

EIGHT CHILDREN COMMIT SUICIDE

In the City of Paris During the Present Month.

Paris, June 29.—The authorities were shocked today by the discovery of the body of fourteen-year-old Louis Vounaux in the canal, making the eighth child suicide recorded this month. The papers have sought scientific explanation of this sudden development of the suicidal mania on the part of children and much has been written about it with little or no concensus of opinion.

The most accepted theory is that this shocking record for the month is the result of the power of suggestion given through the publicity of the child suicides and is attributable to the defective mentality becoming more and more prevalent among a certain portion of the Paris poor.

SEVENTY BABIES DIE IN SIX DAYS

As a Result of the Extreme Heat in Washington.

Washington, June 29.—Seventy babies have died in Washington within the past six days, directly or indirectly as the result of the terrific heat, according to an estimate made today by Coroner Nevitt.

"These figures tell a story of misery, poverty and helplessness," said the coroner. "The majority of the babies were the children of the poor, who are crowded together in alleyways and narrow streets, cut off from the sunshine and pure air."

REBS AND YANKS HOLD REUNION

Men Who Fought Each Other Talk Over Old Battles.

Burlington, N. J., June 28.—Forty-six years ago the chief desire of the men of the Eighth Alabama regiment was the advancement of the Confederate cause without regard to the number of Yankees killed in the process. Today, way up in what was then the enemy's country, they desire only to shake hands with as many of the Yanks as they can reach.

The occasion is the reunion of the survivors of the famous "Yahoos" of the civil war, who were known officially as the Twenty-third New Jersey infantry, with the men against whom they fought at Salem Church, Va., on May 3, 1863. Among the southerners who fought against the New Jerseymen in that famous action were the men of the Eighth Alabama, commanded by Colonel Hilary A. Herbert.

The leader of the Yahoos was Colonel (afterward General) E. Burd Grubb. Today's reunion is taking place at the beautiful home of General Grubb, Grassmere, at Edgewater Park, near here. In addition to the "Yahoos" and the Eighth Alabama, the men of another New Jersey regiment, commanded later by General Grubb, the equally famous "Game Chickens," are present.

Heretofore the Grubb reunions have been held on May 3, the anniversary of the fight at Salem Church, but solicitude for the health of his old followers and the southern veterans caused General Grubb to postpone the meeting this year till now.

A novel feature of the reunion is the presence of members of the Daughters of the Confederacy as guests of Mrs. Grubb. These southern women are assisting Mrs. Grubb in receiving the northern and southern veterans and their wives and daughters.

HARRY CROOKS GETS STAY OF EXECUTION

Court Affirms Death Sentence, but Postpones the Date.

Columbus, O., June 29.—When Governor Harmon started for his summer home at Charlevoix, Mich., without taking any action relative to the case of Harry E. Crooks, sentenced to die Thursday morning, it was thought that the electrocution would take place in the penitentiary as scheduled.

However, word was received later that the circuit court, while affirming the death sentence had postponed its execution until Sept. 3. Crooks was convicted of murdering his wife at Dayton.

Joseph West, another Dayton convicted murderer, was to have been electrocuted July 9, but the circuit court at Dayton has granted him a new trial. He is alleged to have killed Belle Clark of Dayton.

THE FILIPINOS SEEKING WORK

Go in Droves to Hawaii To Take Place of Strikers.

Honolulu, June 28.—Sugar plantation owners here and in other parts of the archipelago have learned that over 100 Filipino laborers are coming to Hawaii in the hope of taking the places of Japanese laborers. That many more Filipinos desire to come is the report among the planters.

There is great interest here in the approaching return of Ambassador Takahira to Japan, and the residents of Hawaii connect his trip to the orient with the recent strike trouble here and with the movement to supplant the Japanese with other plantation laborers.

WIDOW AND HAND HELD BY POLICE

Charged with Murder of Former's Husband.

WOMAN BECOMES BADLY INFATUATED

And Does Away with Her Lord and Master.

Such, at Least, Is the Charge Made by the Farm-Hand, Who Makes a Confession—Body of the Murdered Man, Who Mysteriously Disappears, Is Found Buried on His Farm.

Mankato, Minn., June 28.—Mrs. H. J. Ledbetter, widow of a well-to-do farmer, and Frank Smith, hired man on the farm, are under arrest today charged with murdering Ledbetter. The latter's body was found Sunday buried under three feet of earth on his farm. The head had been crushed in with a blunt instrument. Ledbetter had been missing since May 4.

William Schwandt and Mrs. Schwandt, the latter a sister of Mrs. Ledbetter, are under arrest as a result of a confession said to have been made by Smith, in which he implicated the two latter persons in the removal of the body from its first grave in the barn to a new burying place.

The gruesome find of Sunday resulted from the efforts of P. A. Ledbetter, of Hayward, Wisconsin, brother of the dead man, who believed Ledbetter had met with foul play. He organized a searching party Sunday, arming the men with muskrat spears with which to prod over the farm.

One of the men located the body when his spear struck the buried trunk. Smith, the hired man, aided the searchers in their task.

Smith told the authorities that Mrs. Ledbetter killed her husband with an ax the night of May 4, because of her infatuation for him, Smith. He says he helped bury the body in the barn. It was afterward removed to another grave.

Mrs. Ledbetter denies Smith's story.

DEATHS ARE RESULT OF CARELESSNESS

That's About the Size of Verdict in Killarney Accident.

Killarney, June 29.—Despite the verdict of the coroner's jury that the boating disaster in which several American and English tourists lost their lives, was the fault of no one, the recommendation of the jury that all such boats be strictly inspected, has provoked the suspicion that the jurors considered some evidences of carelessness.

It was indicated during the inquest that the boat was fourteen years old, and had been condemned three years ago, but was subsequently overhauled and again placed in service. One of the boatmen, Gleason, was over seventy years old, and was partly paralyzed. Another, Lynch, was known as a common drunkard, althought it was found that at the time of the accident he was sober.

The third boatman, Leary, said at the time that a competent crew could have avoided the accident, although he later testified that the storm made it unavoidable.

DEATH SHROUDED IN DEEP MYSTERY

Parsons, Kan., June 29.—The body of a man, supposed to be Mack Nelson of Zanesville, O., was found near here in a boxcar of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroad. A note left by the man gave his name and also that of Hugh Nelson, Zanesville, O., his brother.

A bottle of carbolic acid in one of Nelson's pockets caused the police to believe he might have committed suicide, but there is much mystery about the death.

William Moore, a wealthy farmer, father of the girl, on Tuesday gave his consent for the couple's marriage if they recover. Missamore sent a bullet through his neck, and may die.

CRITIC OF DIAZ WHO FACES TRIAL ON LIBEL CHARGE

Carlo De Fornaro, a cartoonist and writer living in New York, faces trial in that city on a charge of criminal libel preferred by Rafael R. Espindola, editor of El Impartial, City of Mexico. Espindola went to New York and secured the arrest of the author. Fornaro declares the Mexican government is behind the prosecution.

FATES STRIKE HARD BLOW AT WELLMAN

Loss of Airship House May Postpone Dash for Pole.

Tromsoe, Norway, June 28. — The steamer Arctic of Walter Wellman's north pole expedition returned here from Spitzbergen with her flags at half mast, bringing the news that Knud Johnson, one of the two men who remained at the Wellman camp this winter, had perished in the pack ice, and that the airship shed had been destroyed by the heavy storm.

Messrs. Wellman and Vaninamn say that the destruction of the airship house means a delay of four or five weeks, and they are uncertain whether it will be practicable to finish the new hall in time to make the voyage northward this summer, but they are determined to make the best possible fight against the ill luck which seems to have pursued the expedition.

THE CURTAIN IS DROPPED AT LAST

Coroner's Jury Writes "Finis" in Woodill-Eastman Tragedy.

St. Michaels, Md., June 29.—With the compromise verdict of the coroner's jury that Robert E. Eastman either killed or was accessory to the murder of Edith May Woodill, and the declaration of State's Attorney Taylor that he was through with the case, the strange dual tragedy which has for nearly a week focused the eyes of the entire country upon this little out-of-the-way hamlet of Maryland's famous eastern shore became a closed incident.

SLAIN BY FUGITIVE IN MARYLAND, HER LIFE A MYSTERY

MRS. EDITH MAY THOMPSON WOODILL.

Much mystery surrounds the life of Mrs. Edith May Thompson Woodill, the woman who was slain by Robert F. Eastman, a fugitive New York broker, near St. Michaels, Maryland. She was the adopted daughter of Colonel Thompson and a protege of Lyman J. Gage, ex-secretary of the treasury, who helped her gain an education. She married Gilbert Woodill of Los Angeles, and was on a visit to her foster parents when she was murdered and her body thrown into a creek. Some reports say that she was born in Minneapolis, but a significant incident bearing upon the mystery of her early life was an advertisement published in a Chicago paper last March asking for information concerning the kidnaping of a girl of her name some eighteen years ago. Eastman killed himself when surrounded by a sheriff's posse near the scene of the murder.

AVENGES DEATH OF HER HUSBAND

When the Law Refuses To Take Action.

SHOOTS MAN SHE BELIEVES GUILTY

On Anniversary of Death of Her Husband.

Saves Her Money To Buy Revolver and Practices with the Weapon To Make Herself Proficient in Its Use—Proves Quicker with Gun Than Her Victim, Who Is Mortally Wounded by Her Shots.

New York, June 28.—After waiting for a whole year for vengeance, after having been told by the police that they could not take a hand in the case, Mrs. Louisa La Bartia, a widow, aged twenty-five years, today mortally wounded Dominico Versagia, aged nineteen. The woman's husband was killed just a year ago today, and she believed that Versagia had killed him. Today she waited for him at the corner, and as he passed on his way to work, she shot him four times, one shot following another in quick succession, while a thousand men, women and children on their way to work in the factory district, ran screaming in all directions. The unconscious youth was removed to a hospital, where it is declared that he has no chance to live. The woman is in jail, where she declared stoically that she is satisfied with what she has done.

Mrs La Bartia had a new revolver concealed beneath her apron, and waited until her quarry should pass. When Versagia saw her, he threw his hand to his hip pocket as if for to pull a revolver.

Woman Is the Quicker.

But the woman, who had studied out her plans, was not to be cheated. She was quicker than he. Her first shot struck him in the abdomen and he turned to run. The second bullet entered his side, a third in the back and he toppled to the ground. The woman stood over him and fired a fourth shot which penetrated his left hand. She was about to pull the trigger for the fifth shot when Morris Becker sprand forward and knocked the weapon from her hand.

There was the wildest panic on the corner. At the sound of the first shot, the human stream of factory employes broke and the crowd scattered in all directions. When Versagia fell, the crowd closed in on the pair and it was with difficulty that the police were able to get the boy's body into an ambulance.

At the police station the woman told her story.

"My husband and I came from Reggio, Italy," she said quietly. "Versagia also came from there. He was a tailor in Reggio, and my husband was an unbrella maker. They knew one another, but were not friendly.

Her Husband Shot.

"Soon after we moved to New York my husband to receive threatening letters. Then one day he was shot down in a doorway near our home. That was just a year ago. I was left penniless. My little baby died because I could not take care of it. This was the sixth baby that I had buried.

"Then I swore a vow to kill the murderer of my husband. I searched everywhere for a clew. For a year I have had no other aim in life. A few days ago, an unsigned letter came to me. It said: 'Your husband's slayer is the Dominico, who used to come and take him out at nights.' I investigated. I found out that Versagia was a member of the Black Hand, and that the letter spoke the truth.

"I went to the police. I showed them the letter and told them what I had found out. They said they could do nothing. They would not even arrest Versagia.

"Then I saved my money, and bought a revolver. I practiced every day so that I could hold my hand steady. I found out where Versagia lived and that he passed that street every morning. I went there today and shot him. I am glad of it. I hope he will die."

LIMAS AND RIZZO HEARING AT TOLEDO

Results in Men Being Placed Under Heavy Bond for Trial.

At Toledo, Monday, Salvatore and Sebastian Lima and Salvatore Rizzo, of this city, had a hearing before a United States commissioner, and as a reference to our telegraphic columns will show, were recommitted to jail in default of bond. City Mail Carrier R. J. Pennell, of this city, was one of the principal witnesses, identifying, as written by Salvatore Lima, threatening letters sent to John Amicon, at Columbus. Other evidence was furnished by Inspector Oldfield. It is not though the men will be able to furnish the heavy bail demanded and they may be forced to remain in the Lucas county jail until fall, when all the alleged members of the Society of the Banana will be tried at Toledo.

Salvatore Batagalia was released.

A VERY CLEVER CHECK SWINDLE

Worked Off on a Firm by Former Employe.

GETS OVER EIGHT THOUSAND DOLLARS

Has the Money Deposited in a London Bank.

Gets the London Bank To Send Him Five Hundred Dollars, with Which He Goes Over to London and Collects Balance—Offers To Repay the Money If the Firm Will Consider It a Loan.

New York, June 28.—After forging a check for £1,637, 14 shillings, on J. S. Bache & Company, brokers, and escaping to London, Conrad Harms wrote a letter to his former employers, telling them if they would agree not to prosecute him, he would accept the money he had stolen as a loan and pay it back in installments, with five per cent. interest. He concluded his letter by pointing out to his employers a system of book-keeping whereby the firm could prevent a similar theft in the future.

The firm accepted the new system of book-keeping, but put the theft into the hands of the district attorney's office, with the result that Scotland Yard detectives arrested Harms in London today. Detectives will go to London to bring Harms back. He has been indicted in New York for forgery and grand larceny.

Harms' method of procedure was very clever. He stole one of the firm's checks, and forged the firm's signature, drawing on the Swiss Bankverein of London for the amount, and ordering them to place the money to his credit at Parr's bank in London. He also stole a certified letter of confirmation, which he sent to the Swiss bankers, having secured, by some shrewd move, the real signature of the Bache firm to this letter of confirmation.

Harms then had the Parr's bank cable $100 to James Gordon, a New York lawyer, from whom he secured the money as a representative of Bache. With this £100 he went to London, and secured £1,400 more from Parr's bank.

CLOSEST RACE OF OCEAN HISTORY

Is Steamed from Fire Island to the English Channel.

London, June 28.—Few ocean passengers have witnessed an ocean race from Fire Island to the English channel. But such was the luck of the passengers of the Hamburg-American, Amerika, and the Red Star liner, Lapland. The Amerika left New York one hour ahead of the Lapland, but the Red Star liner by an extra burst of speed, soon came abreast of her big rival. For seven days and nights the two monsters plowed along side by side, and the passengers kept the wireless operators busy recording bets as to the victor. They maintained an equal position until the Amerika was compelled to bear north to make Plymouth, while the Lapland continued on her course to Dover. Neither ship had been able to gain on the other. The race is said to have been the closest ever run on the Atlantic ocean.

THE WHALERS RETURN HOME

Party of Six Supposed To Have Been Lost on African Coast.

New York, June 28.—Six whalermen from New Bedford, Mass., long given up for dead, were brought safe to land by the White Star liner Celtic. On March 10, off the west coast of Africa, Antone Penna, third mate of the brig Sullivan, and his boat's crew of five men, were carried so far by a whale to which they had made fast that the ship's lookout had lost them.

With but one day's rations and no water, the boat drifted six days before they were picked up by the steamer Max Brock. The Brock put them ashore at Teneriffe, and they have been the rest of the time making their way home.

Epworth Choral Concert.

The last of a series of concerts by the Epworth Choral society was given at Epworth M. E. church, Sunday evening, and was enjoyed by a very large audience regardless of the inclemency of the weather.

The various numbers of the program were pleasing in the extreme and the last concert proved one of the very best of the season.

The vocal soloists were Miss Helen Louise Davis and Mrs. Charles L. Allen. Master Willard Osborne and Miss Pearl Cheney gave violin solos, Miss Jessie Havill contributed an organ selection and Merlyn Bailey and H. S. Martin gave a vocal selection.

STARTING A FROG FARM LOOKS VERY PROMISING

Government Will Give the Frog Breeder Pointers.

A GREAT MARKET FOR BIG BULLFROGS

In Some Places the Frogs Grow to an Enormous Size—Not Much Trouble To Care for Them—Pond and a Protection Against Snakes the Chief Requirements.

A gentleman of this city has recently received pamphlets from the department of agriculture on the raising of the large food bullfrog. It is the purpose of the gentleman shortly to start the culture of the frog on quite an extensive plan. It is also the intention of the gentleman to get a large collection of the best bullfrogs he can find and put them in a large marsh that is located near his place in Santa Rosa county, fencing the marsh in such a manner that snakes cannot get into it. It is thought by the gentleman that he can thus raise a large number of healthy bullfrogs for the market and make a good profit out of the business.

"I have been living in Escambia and Santa Rosa counties for the last ten years," he said, "and have noticed the plenitude of bullfrogs that are in the fresh water bodies in both counties. The frogs grow to monstrous size and seem to thrive in this section of the country. I think that a large and better grade of frog can be raised with proper care and I think that the raising of the frog will make a comfortable living for the man who engages in the business.

"I wrote to the department of agriculture some months ago inquiring as to the method of raising the frog, and have received a pamphlet giving me full directions. My intention is to fence in the marsh that is on my place and start a frog farm in it. I shall get all the snakes out of the place and keep it as clean as possible, so that the frogs will be healthy at all times. I shall have the enclosure large enough to accommodate a large number of the croakers.

"I believe that there is an ample market for them in Pensacola, as all the restaurants and hotels buy them whenever they can. The reason for the great scarcity of frogs at the present time is not that they are scarce, but that they are rather difficult to catch.

"I am a firm believer in the work and shall set out with an eye to succeed. It seems to me that all a man has to have is a mudpuddle in his backyard and put some frogs in it, put a fence around it and feed the frogs. The climate is natural to them and they will thrive in spite of all efforts to exterminate them. With a little attention a large, high grade frog can be raised."—Pensacola News.

BISHOP M'FAUL, WHO PUTS BAN ON SEVERAL BIG UNIVERSITIES

Bishop James A. McFaul of the Roman Catholic diocese of Trenton, New Jersey, stirred the heads of the big universities, such as Yale, Harvard and Princeton, when he denounced them as teaching and inculcating immorality in his address to the graduating class of the College of St. Francis Xavier in New York City. President Hadley of Yale declared he believed the bishop had been misquoted, but Bishop McFaul replied that he had not only been correctly quoted, but that he had much more to say along te same lines. In a subsequent interview the bishop was quoted as saying, "I shall instruct every Catholic I can reach that to send his son to one of these universities is comparable to committing his soul to perdition."

ALL OBSTACLES CLEARED AWAY

Survey of Scioto River Improvement Will Proceed.

ENGINEERING CORPS TO BE ORGANIZED

And the Work Pushed to Completion. May Take Three Months To Complete Survey and Estimates—The Supreme Court Decision Clears the Way for Improvement.

In the matter of Oliver Monnette and others against F. M. Epley and others, a proceeding brought to restrain the county commissioners from improving the Little Scioto river, Prosecutor Charles L. Justice has given an opinion at the request of County Surveyor Edward S Ault, the opinion being an interpretation of a recent decision of the supreme court.

While the matter was pending in the courts the surveyor was requested by the petitioners to proceed with the preliminary survey, and was threatened with a mandamus proceeding when he refused to act until the matter had been disposed of by the courts. Since the ruling of the supreme court, the petitioners have been insistent in their demands that work be taken up at once, but the surveyor refused to move until the prosecutor had had time to prepare a written interpretation of the decision of the court.

The prosecutor finds that the court has removed all obstacles presented by the remonstrators and the surveyor is at liberty, in fact is bound, to proceed with the work as promptly as circumstances will permit. Acting on this interpretation the surveyor began work on the preliminary map essential to the survey, Monday, and, as soon as the map is completed, will put a big engineering corps in the field for the purpose of making a complete survey of the river from the Marion-Crawford county line to the mouth of the street, just south of Green Camp, an estimated distance of twenty miles

The engineering corps will consist of two engineers and from fifteen to twenty men to serve as rodmen, chainmen, axmen and in the other capacities incident to such work. The engineers will be paid from $100 to $125 a month each. The other workers will receive fifty dollars a month each. With the exception of the engineers, the workers will be secured from the farms lying along the line of the improvement for two very important reasons. First, they will be on the ground, and the taxpayers will be saved the expense of conveying them to the scene of operations each day. Second, they will be workmen accustomed to rough duties and capable of giving good service in the grubbing, digging and carrying which will be necessary to the establishment of a transit line through much of the heavy undergrowth which borders the stream.

It is the intention of the engineer to take out all half-circles in the course of the channel. It will be necessary to place a stake every 100 feet along the line and a cross-section of the river bed will be necessary every 100 feet. It will be seen readily that the task is an extensive as well as an expensive one and will consume a great deal of time. The final hearing of the commissioners on the improvement petition is set for September 1, but the engineer states that it will be impossible to have the survey finished by that time.

From the first day the survey is taken up until it is finished, it will be made complete in every detail Every record of the survey will be kept strictly up to date, so that it will not be necessary to go over any part of the work a second time.

The surveyor has ordered 2,000 stakes delivered along the line of the proposed survey, not later than next week, and it is expected that the work will be begun soon after the delivery of the stakes.

ORDER EASTERN STAR MEMORIAL SERVICES

Are Held Sunday Afternoon in Masonic Temple.

LIVES OF NOBLE WOMEN GIVE INSPIRING THEME

For Eloquent Discourse by Rev. J. P. Currin—List of Departed Members of Local Chapter—The Catholic Knights Meet and Elect Delegates to Tiffin Convention—Notes.

The members of Lydia Chaprter, No. 83, Order of the Eastern Star, held their annual memorial services at the Masonic temple, Sunday afternoon, the services being fairly well attended. Owing to the inclement weather, the opening of the program was delayed an half hour, and it was 3 o'clock when the first number, an appropriate vocal selection, was rendered by a quartet, composed of Mrs. J. B. Taylor, Miss Lydia Knapp, W. R. Waddell and R. R. Wright. Mrs. D. E. J. Brockett played the piano accompaniment.

Rev. J. P. Currin, pastor of the First Baptist church, delivered the memorial address, in which he drew some grand lessons from the life of Queen Esther, with comments which were both timely and interesting

The speaker first made reference to the five leading characters in the great historic drama of centuries ago, the life drama in which Queen Esther moved. Her character was such that her sympathies went out to her people in their oppressions and under the motto, "I Will," she set about doing that which was good, that which was just and that which was best for all. Rev. Mr. Currin reviewed the story of what she accomplished, and how she made herself one of the greatest figures in the history of her times. He then drew attention to the fact that it was not necessary that one wait for something great to do in order to model one's life after that of the queen. All good things are brought about by battling for them, and the little battles are as necessary to progress in the world as the great ones. The individual should, with the steadfastness of purpose of the great queen, set about doing that which is at hand to be done. Contentment in a minor part means in the end a rise to greater things, and a duty well done in a small accomplishment models one's character for the loftier work. In closing the speaker quote from the poem, "Jeptha's Daughter," and made reference to Ruth, another historic example of sterling womanhood.

Following the address a vocal solo was given by Mr. R. R. Wright, with an accompaniment on the piano by Miss Ada Bowen.

The memorial service in accord with the ritual was performed by Mrs. William J. Fies, Mrs. Harriet Waddell and Mrs. Stella Cunningham. The exercises were concluded with a song by the audience and a benediction by Rev. C. E. Miller.

A list of the deceased members of the chapter is as follows, in the order of their passing:

Abigail DeWitt, Mary B. Smith, Florence Parkinson, Mary Hedges, John Wilson, Rose Oppenheimer, Belle Bland, A. B. McMurray, Rosetta Knapp, Joseph Johnston, Mary E. Powers, Philip Dombaugh, U. K. Guthery, Charles R. Clark, Rebecca Miller, Alice Hazen and Ellen R. Matthews.

Meet To Elect Delegates.

A called meeting of the Catholic Knights of Ohio was held in their hall on north Main street, Sunday afternoon, for the purpose of electing delegates to the state convention to be held in Tiffin in September. J. W. Navin and H. A. Schuler were elected delegates to the convention and Michael Lawler and T. J. Coffey were elected alternates.

IN LOVING MEMORY OF THE DEPARTED

Marion Lodge of Home Guards of America Hold Service

CHAIRS ARE DRAPED, GRAVES DECORATED

Interesting Program Rendered Sunday Afternoon—"Friendship Charity and Protection" the Motto of the Order, Forms Theme for an Eloquent Discourse

Marion Home No 18 Home Guards of America observed its annual memorial exercises at the lodge hall Sunday afternoon at [illegible] o'clock. A large percentage of the membership besides a large number of friends were present. An interesting as well as appropriate program was rendered. Mr M I Alexander was in charge. The program opened with the singing of the hymn "Nearer My God to Thee" by the audience. Rev J W Miles followed with a short prayer and the memorial roster was read by J A Rice. The list of departed members comprises the names of F W Harper, George C Howison, J E Gardner, Honore L Coffey, James S Gilliland, Louis Kindsill, George R Knapp and George Schoenlaub.

Rev J W Miles delivered the memorial address. He spoke feelingly, taking his text from the lodge motto, "Friendship, Charity and Protection." He brought out how friendship was almost a necessity to life. A perfectly solitary being, he considered, was truly lost. Explaining friendship as a mutual affection between human beings he spoke at some length on the subject. It arises, he thought, from the esteem for one another's excellence and has its expression in kindly offices.

He considered Charity as the great trait of human nature. "It never faileth," he said. It is indeed a principle that never fails in the organization of social unity. He thought that protection was an obligation that God placed upon the strong to protect the weak.

The program closed with the singing of the hymn "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

The lodge hall was very pretty with appropriate decorations. The lodge flower, the white carnation, was much in evidence in the decorations. Eight chairs were draped in reverence for the departed members whose graves had been decorated by the floral committee in the morning.

THE NEW PATRIOTISM

By

William T. Ellis

The International Sunday-School Lesson for July 4 Is "Paul's Second Missionary Journey Antioch to Philippi"

The passing of the [illegible] of jingoism is an evidence of the changing spirit of our times. These first days of July in the United States are flavored by memories of the Declaration of Independence and in Canada by the observance of Confederation day. Once it was common to hear at Fourth of July celebrations in the States the most blatant spread eagleism, but this bellicose strutting and crowing barnyard fashion has given way to a more rational and dignified mood. The best patriots are feeling keenly their obligations as world citizens and they are studying their relations to all other nations. The American spirit is expressing itself by a new frank facing of the day's internationalism. Canada never held so truly national a gathering as that which met in Toronto a few months ago to consider Canada's missionary policy with respect to herself and the whole earth. America's Christian manhood is likewise to come together next spring in a meeting that may easily take rank with the great history making assemblies of the nation's formative period.

The springs of patriotism go down to the depths of the spirit. It is easy to speak of country and of God in the one breath. There is a straight line connecting the patriotism of the year 1909 in this new western world with the Sunday school lesson of the day. For the latter marks the advent of Christianity into Europe. The great historic step was made which carried the gospel out of Asia into the land which was for nearly twenty centuries to remain its strength and [illegible].

Doubtless on the journey from Troas to Neapolis nobody paid particular attention to an inconspicuous little Jew and his small band of companions who day after day were seen in most earnest converse upon some serious theme. Yet that was a greater day for Europe than when Xerxes or Philip of Macedon or Augustus marched their legions over this edge of Europe. So today it stirs one's imagination to see, as he leans over the visitors' gallery at Ellis Island and watches the stream of immigrants passing before the inspectors, and wonders which of these unkempt big eyed boys carries in his cloth bundle a new epoch for America.

A Traveling Preacher

Philippi, whither Paul was bound, is now a heap of ruins scarcely heeded by the obscure Turkish village near its site. Most of the names of places and the places and customs themselves that became familiar to Paul's ears and eyes have passed away. Still the air is rent with the echoes of shots and shrieks of awful massacre of men and women throughout the region traversed by Paul's company on his second missionary journey, all for the sake of the Name which he preached. Asia Minor and adjacent Europe—what we may roughly call the Pauline neighborhood—are in a tumult and uproar that attract the attention of Christendom. The wise reader of the daily newspaper cons the cable dispatches in the light of these illuminating dispatches from Holy Writ, and likewise the student of the apostolic church is not unmindful of the later acts that are transpiring in this region.

It had been half a dozen years since Paul had made his first missionary tour throughout Asia Minor. Now he was setting out again on the same long, hard journey that would consume two or three years more. As mere travel would such a journey be worth while? Our restless age is overemphasizing the pleasure and profit of travel in itself. No lives are more wasted than those which are spent in wandering up and down the face of the earth, flitting from spot to spot in an endeavor to stimulate jaded interest. Travel for a great purpose is supremely worth while, but travel for travel's sake soon becomes a weariness to the flesh. Paul was sustained in his journeys by the consciousness that he was bent on a great mission.

This time he was not accompanied by Barnabas, for the latter wanted to take along his kinsman John Mark. Inasmuch as the young man had proved a broken reed on the previous journey Paul would not take him again. The dispute which sent Paul and Barnabas on separate tours is a comforting touch of human nature to those who are inclined to think that the Bible characters are all free from human frailties. Paul chose instead Silas, and they went together through Syria and Silesia and back to Derbe and Lystra and Iconium, strengthening the faith of the churches and delivering the decree of the council at Jerusalem. It is as important missionary work to look after the existing churches as it is to plant new churches in unreached regions. At Lystra Paul added to his company young Timothy, the son of a Jewess mother and a Greek father, who later became dear to the apostle's heart and a power in the church.

What varied armies have marched over the same historic ground that was traversed by this little band of bearers of good news! The imagination is stimulated by a contemplation of the scenes made most memorable by their association with the evangelists. For one man with a great message means more to history than a great army equipped with all the military paraphernalia of its day. It was to conquest that this band went—even as sensitive friends who go to the [illegible] to bid farewell to their missionary representatives sometimes catch a vision of far off transformations to be effected by the labors of these men and women.

Since this is designated for study as a missionary lesson it is well to remember as a practical missionary method that it is not good for a man to go out alone as a missionary. The consensus of expert missionary judgment is against the placing of one or two persons in lonely interior stations. It is better to establish a considerable force in the missionary compound and to work out from this base. I have seen an important hospital in Peking closed simply because the mission board of one of the great American denominations had inadequately manned it and when one doctor fell ill the work stopped. The new interest in missions will call boards more rigidly to account for their method of administration. It is better not to try to occupy so many places than to occupy each inadequately. Paul did his missionary work in association with a variety of comrades, even as the present day missionary propaganda presents many fronts to the world.

It is worth noting that this was a Spirit guided company of men. They took counsel together, of course, and yet ultimate decision in all their actions rested upon the illumination of the Divine Spirit. When the Spirit bade them hasten through Asia without preaching they did so. Their power to win resided wholly in their willingness to obey. They knew themselves to be men under authority, and it was in loyalty to that Voice that they found success.

The Men Who Hear Calls

This was a band of idealists and dreamers who, regardless of the hardships by the way, pressed on toward new fields of service. They belonged to the endless train of visionaries into whose hearts God has put the pioneer spirit. These men who hear calls to the new and undiscovered region have ever been the champions of history's enlarging sphere. To them all new discoveries are owed. They are like Columbus, adding new continents to the world's dominions. Some types of men work best in well worn grooves. They like the accustomed ways and the voice of human direction over them. Others are forever dreaming of new ways of doing the old service. They are the inventors, the explorers and the captains of civilization. It would be a sad day for mankind if ever this divine fire departed from the hearts of men.

Paul, standing on the edge of Asia, saw in a vision a man in Europe and heard his voice calling, "Come over and help us." It was the sensitive soul's perception of the spiritual needs of an unevangelized region. The Macedonian call has become a shopworn missionary phrase. Most persons are familiar with this incident than with the actual facts of today's missionary conditions, to believe that the heathen today are calling even as did the Macedonian man of old. There are one or two non-Christian lands which are like unto Macedonia in that their call for the better things the gospel is [illegible]. In the main, though, it is a call of need rather than of desire that is heard from the mission field.

When Paul finally got to Philippi, instead of eager waiting multitudes he found only a praying woman ready to hear his message. Perhaps he experienced something of the shock of finding himself not wanted and not courted, which has come to hundreds of missionaries since as they reached the land of their desire. Ordinarily a missionary is not desired, but he is needed none the less. It takes a deeper vision and a higher courage to do service in these conditions than to go where one is welcomed with open arms.

The Christian church is not engaged in the business of giving men what they want, but of giving them what they need. The twentieth century is vocal with clamorous appeals for many things. In their social unrest men say they want a new order of politics, a new kind of economics, a new kind of social relationship. This is the [illegible] demand, but the real need is for more of the brotherly [illegible] spirit of Jesus in human lives.

The New Patriotism

Down by the river bank of Philippi Paul found a woman merchant and devout proselyte. It may have seemed a bit of irony to him that his first convert in Europe should not be a European, but an Asiatic. Lydia was a seller of purple from Thyatira. Ever since, women were the best friends of God. The first converts and final defenders of a faith are usually women. This prosperous business woman was baptized with her whole household and with the hospitality which characterizes simple Christian faith she welcomed the band of evangelists to her home with an urgency that would not be gainsaid.

So began the career of Christianity in Europe. With what bit of outreaching endeavor on the part of Paul we see prefigured the history of Christendom. For the Christian nations are the pioneer nations, as a nation [illegible] pagan people. The ships that sail all seas mostly fly Christian flags and the commerce of the world is done almost exclusively by Christian nations or by nations that have lately come under the impulse of Christian sentiment. Now, because the gospel was early borne to Europe, Europe and her child America are bearing the gospel back to Asia.

The new patriotism is milder than the older jingoism. It is saner, but it is stronger. No longer do we hear the cry "My country, right or wrong," but from all quarters the conception of our nation's welfare for the world's sake is echoing. It is literally true today that over the flags of Christian nations, at the mastheads of their ships as well as in the realm of metaphor, there flies the flag of the cross. The best patriotism is that which gives its best possession for the welfare of all nations.

SAMUEL MILLER THE SUBJECT OF COMPLAINT

Mrs. Miller Says He Fails To Pay Her Alimony.

COURT IS ASKED TO PUNISH MAN

Mrs. Georgie L. Hilty Asks the Court for Additional Temporary Alimony from Her Husband, Joseph Hilty. A Sale of Goods Involved in a Receivership—Court Notes.

In the divorce matter of Martha Miller against Samuel Miller, the plaintiff has filed a motion in the common pleas court, through Attorney John H Clark, asking the court to punish the defendant for contempt because of his alleged failure to comply with the court's orders with reference to the payment of alimony. When Mrs. Miller was granted a decree of divorce she was awarded $2,200 alimony. Except for the first payment of $150 cash, the defendant was ordered to pay the plaintiff the alimony in installments of $25, the fifteenth of every month, until the whole amount is paid The motion sets up that Miller, who recently filed a deed of assignment in the probate court, has failed to make the payment of $25, due June 15.

A motion asking the court to grant her additional temporary alimony has been filed in the common pleas court by Georgie L. Hilty, through Attorneys Jacoby & Donithen. Her husband, Joseph Hilty, filed a petition for a divorce. She filed an answer and cross-petiton.

In the receivership matter of the Root Glass company, of Terre Haute, Indiana, against the Marion Preserving company, Receiver Fred L. Carhart filed a motion in the common pleas court to sell the company's goods and chattels at private sale. The motion was allowed by Judge Daniel Babst.

A romance of the Royal skating rink had its sequel in the court of common pleas, Saturday, when Hazel Ethel Deibert, nee Steinfeld, brought an alimony action against her husband, Don. C. Deibert, whom she accuses of brutal treatment and desertion.

The couple were married September 19, 1907, after an acquaintance which began during the roller-skating craze two or three years ago. One son, aged less than one year, was born to them. The plaintiff alleges that the defendant struck her with his fist at different times without cause or provocation and finally abandoned her. He refuses to live with her, although the plaintiff has asked him to do so. She asks that she be granted reasonable alimony and that he be restrained from drawing $36 due him from the Erie Railroad company. The plaintiff is represented by Attorney L. E. Myers.

Milda Unland was granted a divorce from Charles Unland by Judge B. G. Young, Saturday, in the common pleas court. She charged the defendant with failure to provide and gross neglect of duty. The Unlands were married, October 23, 1906, one child, now two years of age, being born to them. The child was ordered placed in the children's home and the father is directed by the court to pay $12 a month as alimony and for the support of the infant In the defendant's answer and cross-petition he charged the mother with being an unfit person to have the care and custody of the child, a boy.

In the partition suit of Mary J. Leverton against Ellen Mack and others a motion to require the court to compel the defendants to make their answers more definite and certain has been sustained. The defendants are given leave to plead by July 3.

In the matter of the Story & Clark Piano company against J. Lee Shaw, the plaintiff company has filed a reply in which all responsibility for an account set up in the defendant's answer is denied, in the court of common pleas.

In the damage proceeding of John Rowe, administrator of the estate of Martin Coughlin, against the Erie Railroad company, the defendant company has filed an answer in the court of common pleas. All responsibility for the injury and death of Coughlin, February 12, 1909, is denied.

The divorce matter of Gottlieb Beck against Margaret Beck, in the court of common pleas, was given a hearing by Judge B. G. Young, at noon Monday. A decision was reserved.

Uncapher Wants Out.

Earl Uncapher, who is held a prisoner in the Marion county jail to answer to a charge of petit larceny, and who has been unable to give a bond of $300 required of him, has applied to the probate court for a rehearing of his case, claiming that the evidence on which he was committed to jail is not sufficient to warrant the action. 8he court set the reexamination for July 1.

THE HARROLD TRACTORS WILL BE BUILT HERE

Arrangements Closed Today To Arrangements Closed Tuesday To

DELAWARE COMPANY WILL LOCATE HERE

Contract Covers a Development Period, with Option on the Leader Business, and Permanent Location Is the Thing Hoped For—Company Has Bright Prospects.

Newton M. Miller, secretary of the Ohio Tractor Manufacturing company, of Delaware, was here Tuesday, and closed arrangements with W. G. Harding, trustee of the Marion Manufacturing Company of Ohio, whereby the Harrold gasoline tractor will be manufactured at the Leader works. The arrangement covers a development period, and includes an option on the Leader tools, machinery and material, and the permanent location of the tractor works in Marion is an agreeable probability.

The Ohio Tractor company, in the Harrold gasoline tractor, seems to have solved the gasoline tractor problem, and have a traction motor that is proving a success in every trial. It is winning such favor that the limited shop facilities at Delaware are wholly inadequate, and Marion has been able to have this new enterprise start on its enlarged career in this city. The company will bring its office to Marion in the course of the next thirty days, and will start manufacturing in the Leader works next week. A few trained workmen will be brought from Delaware to Marion, otherwise the working force, as it is needed, will be enlarged from the ranks of available Marion mechanics.

Plans will be laid at once for the manufacture of twenty of the tractors, most of which have already been sold.

The Ohio Tractor Manufacturing company is a corporation with a capital of $50,000. Its officers are William McKinzie, president; Amos Harrold, vice president; Newton M. Miller, secretary; A. S. Conklin, treasurer; H. F. Owen, sales manager. The above named persons and Judge E. M. Wickham constitute the directory. Messrs. Miller, Harrold and Owen will have their offices here and look after the executive management of the business.

Only last week the company booked an order for four tractors to be shipped to one agency in California. The agency had thoroughly tested one of the first Harrold tractors built, and speaks glowingly of the prospects of the sale on the Pacific coast.

Billiard Hall Changes Hands.

J. S. Green, of Galion, has purchased of V. D. Smart the Colonial billiard and bowling parlor, on north Main street, taking possession of the business Monday afternoon. Mr. Green has had a wide experience in the business and, after making a few improvements, will conduct an up-to-date place.

given distance. Moreover, in his construction, Brunel antedated our modern shipbuilders by using the cellular system of construction and steel decks. He was the first to introduce the longitudinal girder method, which, during the past few years, has been reintroduced by many naval architects with a view to securing a stronger construction and one better adapted to meet the stresses to which a ship is subjected in a seaway. About this time the advantages of the screw propeller as a means of propulsion were receiving increasing recognition, and the "China," built in 1862, is a good type vessel of that date. She was 337 feet in length, and maintained a sea speed of about fourteen knots. From this time on, all transatlantic steamships were driven by single screw propellers. There was a rapid increase in size and horsepower, until the maximum for single-screw ships was reached in 1884, when the twin ships "Umbria" and "Etruria" were launched. These vessels, 525 feet in length and 19.6 knots in speed, were provided with engines of 14,500 horse-power, which was developed on a single shaft.

The difficulty in securing reliable propeller-shaft forgings of sufficient size to carry the large horsepower of modern transatlantic liners, coupled with the many advantages secured by the use of twin screws, led to the construction of two vessels, the "City of Paris" and the "City of New York," which were provided with two triple-expansion engines, each driving a separate propeller. These vessels were not only the first of their type, but were unprecedented in size and in the richness of their appointments. They were 560 feet long, sixty-three feet broad, of 15,000 tons displacement, and their engines of 20,000 horse-power drove them across the Atlantic as a sustained sea speed of about 20.7 knots. They went into sercive in 1889

The first vessel to cross the Atlantic at a speed of over twenty-two knots was the twin-screw ship "Lucania," 620 feet in length and of 19,425 tons displacement, whose engines of 30,000 horse-power enabled her to make a crossing from New York to Queenstown at a speed of 22.1 knots. She was placed in service in 1893

The part played by the German companies in improving the transatlantic steamship record has been a brilliant one. The first ship to surpass the mark set by the "Lucania" was the "Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse," 1897, of the North German Lloyd line. This handsome vessel was the first to carry the four funnels which are now characteristic of fast ocean liners. She was 649 feet long, of 21,000 tons displacement, and her engines of 31,000 horse-power sufficed to carry her from Sandy Hook to Plymouth, under favorable conditions, at an average sea speed of twenty-three knots.

The first ocean steamship to exceed the "Great Eastern" in length was the "Oceanic" of the White Star company, which made her appearance in 1899. She is 705 feet in length, 32,500 tons maximum displacement, and eleven minutes, at an average speed of 25.7 knots. It is expected that during the present summer, under favorable conditions of wind and weather, this ship will make the trip at an average speed of twenty-six knots.

When the great Cunard turbine boats made their appearance it was predicted that they marked the limit of dimensions, and that they would never be surpassed in size or speed. In speed they probably never will be surpassed, at least until some lighter and more economical form of motive power, such as the producer-gas engine, has been developed for high-speed transatlantic work. In size, however, they are destined to be greatly surpassed by the "Olympic," which is now under construction at Belfast for the White Star company, though this vessel will probably not be in service for two or three years. These truly enormous vessels, the sister ship will be named "Titanic," will be 890 feet in length, ninety-two feet in beam, and sixty-four feet in molded depth. The extreme height of the ship from keel to roof of pilot house will be 105 feet. In general appearance the "Olympic" will not be unlike the "Mauretania." She will have our elliptical funnels, each twenty-eight feet at the bow, forty-five feet to the level of the main deck, sixty-two feet to the boat deck amidships, and forty-two feet at the stern. A striking novelty will be the provision of a single pole mast forward of the bridge. At thirty-five feet draft the roof of the pilot house will be seventy feet above the water.

No attempt will be made to emulate the speed of the famous Cunarders, the 45,000 horse-power engines being sufficient, calling for twenty-one knots sea speed. To secure this, the ship will be provided with combined reciprocating and turbine engines, consisting of two reciprocating engines, driving the wing propellers, which will exhaust into a low-pressure turbine driving the center propeller. In point of displacement the "Olympic" will greatly exceed the "Mauretania." Her speed being so much less, it is not necessary to give the hull such fine lines, and therefore her model will "fill the block," as the naval architects say, more fully On her maximum draft of 37½ feet she will displace about 60,000 tons, as against a displacement of 45,000 tons on the same draft for the "Mauretania." THIRTY STITCHES TO CLOSE BOY'S WOUNDS

Lad Falls from Tree and Sustains Very Serious Injuries.

A twelve-year-old lad by the name of Bailey fell from an apple tree at the home of his foster parent, Mr. Rogers, of Bennett street, Saturday about 6 o'clock, and badly lacerated his right arm. The muscles, ligaments and nerves were torn from the shoulder to below the elbow. Drs H J Lower and C G Smith were called and thirty stitches were taken in the boy's arm.

anese declare that the strikes will be resumed on July 1, when 3,000 Japanese laborers who have returned to work will be called out. All the Japanese on the islands are banded into one organization made up of squads of twenty men, each squad under a captain. The organization is perfect. The plan is for intermittent strikes, calling out the men on alternate plantations so that enough will remain at work to support those on strike. The planters say that if this scheme is undertaken the laborers will all be ordered off the plantations. This would mean that the Japanese would be forced to vacate the houses owned by the planters, and thousands of them would be homeless. The planters now are planning to import laborers from Europe. One of the pictures in the accompanying group shows a company of Japanese immigrants landing at Honolulu. In recent years they have poured in there by the tens of thousands. Many of these men have medals for service in the war with Russia. Another picture is that of a monument to a Japanese striker killed in the recent riots. The monument was erected by the comrades of the dead man.

SIGHT SHE WAITS FOR KILLS MASSON'S HEN

She Dies of Joy Watching Her Little Ducklings.

ONE WIGGLE OF JOY AND ALL IS OVER

As a Special Favor to the Old Hen He Allows Her To Hatch a Number of Ducklings After She Waits for the Opportunity Ten Years—How She Handles Her Little Chicks.

"I am sorry to say that Kelley Masson's long memory hen is dead," said Packy Griswold of Hammondsport, New York. "She was ten years old and lived on Kelley's vineyard farm in the town of Pultney in old Steuben.

"The first brood the hen ever hatched was from a setting of ducks' eggs She was very fond of that first family of hers, and they were only a few days old when she strolled with them proudly through the vineyard toward the lake at the foot of the vineyard.

"The ducklings no sooner came in sight of the water than they toddled toward it, unmindful of the frantic calls of their hen mother or her distress They plunged into the lake and were at once having the time of their small lives By and by, seeing that no harm came to her brood in the water, the hen quieted down and soon seemed to be enjoying the antics of the ducklings in the lake as much as they were themselves.

"Every day after that the hen escorted her brood to the lake and stood by and watched them sporting in the water with as plain evidences of enjoyment of the scene as actions could give. She continued to take this pleasure every day until the ducks were grown

"The next spring this hen was set on eggs of her own kind. Everybody about the place had forgotten the episode of the ducklings, but it was recalled vividly when the hen the very first thing she did when she got about with her new brood led it straightway to the lake.

"Her surprise was palpable when none of the family showed any disposition to go into the water, and she tried to coax them in. Not succeeding in that, she picked up one of the chicks in her bill and dropped it into the lake. She stood and watched its struggles in the water until the little thing drowned.

"That seemed to be a disappointment to her She pondered over the matter a while and then picked up another chick and dropped it in the lake. That chick of course struggled in the same way and soon died.

"This seemed to work on the hen's temper She grabbed another chick and tossed it into the water and threw another in right after it. She was evidently determined to dump the whole disappointing brood into the lake, but her owner thought the sacrifice to the hen's memory had gone far enough and he rescued the remainder of the brood.

"That hen hatches a brood of chickens every year. Not once has she failed to lead it to the lake and try to get it to go into the water, ending up by grabbing a chick and tossing it in, when she would be corralled and shut up again.

"So Kelley Masson's long memory hen came to be a regular thing to refer to among the wonders of the region. I was giving the record of the hen to a New York man who was in Hammondsport the other day and he was anxious to go see her, as it was about time for her to have another brood on hand to exercise that memory of hers

"I told him that Kelley Masson was an awful busy man just at that time of year and wouldn't care to be bothered with taking anybody down to his vineyard to see the hen, but the New York man was persistent and I went with him to the store to see if Kelley would do it.

"'By jocks, Packy!' said Kelley. 'It's too bad but you're too late to have him see the long memory hen'

"'What's the matter?' said I.

"'She's dead!' said Kelley 'Died this morning

"'No' said I. 'What killed her?'

"'Joy, I think,' said Kelly. 'This spring as a favor to her, she having been disappointed so many years, I let her hatch out a brood of ducks, just as she had ten years ago

"'She took 'em down to the lake, and of course they plunged right in and went to having a jolly time off hand It was a sight to see that old hen.

"'She ran up and down the shore two or three time, cackling with what was just as plain delight as if rate he didn't, and I don't know when I've felt so sorry over anything as I do over the death of Kelley Masson's long memory hen."—New York Sun.

BURGLARS VISIT TWO RESIDENCES

Homes of Mrs. E. Huber and F. A. Huber Entered.

The residences of Mrs. E. Huber, of east Center street, and F. A. Huber, of east Church street, were entered by burglars, Thursday night, but the robbers were not rewarded for their trouble. It is supposed the men worked during the storm so that the slight noise made by them would not attract the attention of the occupants of the residences.

At the Huber home, on east Center street, entrance was gained through a window to the dining-room. Mrs. Huber, seeing a light flash into her room, awakened and, believing it to be storming, went to close a window in the bath-room. On looking out she found the sky clear, but she did not realize that burglars were in the house. The flash is supposed to have been caused by one of the flash-lights used by the burglars. The fellows left the house by way of the front door, which they left open, and it is supposed they were frightened away by hearing Mrs. Huber. Nothing was stolen.

At the home of F. A. Huber, the men gained an entrance by prying open a window leading to the rear porch. To do this, a spade was used, but the window had not been locked and opened easily. The drawers of Mr. Huber's desk were opened and ransacked, but nothing was taken. The refrigerator was also searched and the door left open. As nothing was taken it is believed that the men were only in search of money.

BINDLEY GROCERY CO. PURCHASES PROPERTY

And Will Extend Its Building and Switching Facilities.

The Bindley Grocery company completed a deal with Perry Shoots Tuesday, whereby it comes into possession of the old Mosier property situated opposite the site of the old Erie depot. The plat of ground is 51x81 feet in dimensions and will be utilized by the company for building purposes

It is the intention of the company in the near future to increase its building capacity, and at the same time, improve its switching facilities. The ground acquired is so located in relation to the present quarters of the company that a switch can be extended between the old and new buildings and the facilities for loading and unloading merchandise will be greatly improved.

The management of the company states that the erection of a new building will not be long delayed and the improvements contemplated will be up to date in every way.

soon overtake it by swimming.

"On reaching it if under water try to seize the clothing at the back of the neck; in the absence of these lift by the armpits, the chin or the hair. If the bottom is rocky or sandy and you are near it, take a good pushoff, but if the water is too deep or the bottom soft and muddy swim to the surface, using legs and free arm.

"Now before describing how to carry a victim ashore it will be well to touch on the most dangerous phase of life saving, the rescue of persons made frantic by fear.

"Water polo players have recently developed a system of breaks and holds that has been adopted by scientific life savers and has been of invaluable assistance to them. Its most simple features are within reach of any one and will enable you to handle even the worst cases with comparative safety.

"In approaching a struggling per-press an abdomen and stomach and force the water out. If nothing round is at hand make a small bundle of clothes or use a chair or stool and press the water out with your hands.

"When the lungs are free it is necessary to apply artificial respiration until they have been restored to natural breathing. First, care should be taken to clean mouth and throat thoroughly with a handkerchief, towel or cloth. Next seize the tongue and either tie it just beyond the lips or hold it there, so that it will not be drawn in with the intake of air and obstruct the passage.

"In many cases the application of smelling salts or pungent herbs to the patient's nostrils or the tickling of his throat with a feather will at this stage be sufficient to start respiration. If not you should use either the universally taught Sylvester method or tongue traction."

MRS. GILBERT, WHO SEEKS TO BARE MYSTERIES OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Mrs. Della M. Gilbert, of New York, who caused a sensation recently by issuing a public statement asserting that Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, founder of Christian Science, is either dead or mindless, has not relinquished her efforts to prove her assertion. She now declares that she believes Mrs. Eddy died last July and was buried under the house where she is supposed to be living at Brookline, Massachusetts. Mrs. Gilbert is now in New England trying to raise funds to investigate the Brookline house. She insists that she can produce disclosures that will startle the world if assisted by the courts in her investigation. Mrs. Gilbert was a Christian Science leader for many years and undertook to found a church in the fashionable Plaza hotel in New York. This did not meet with the approval of the officers of the mother church, and the result was Mrs. Gilbert's attack on the Boston leaders and her assertions concerning Mrs. Eddy.

that fine distinction between persons and places and objects and conditions which is at the basis of intelligent pleasure in life. There are so many, innumerable odors—not unpleasant or offensive odors as most people who cannot smell foolishly imagine—and such smell is distinct and characteristic to its object. You know what Helen Keller says about each person having a distinctive odor—a pleasant odor chiefly—and so I find generally has each place, each condition, almost every object.

"Perhaps one of the interesting things to you persons who do not smell at all is that each city has its own distinctive odors. When you come into New York, for instance, you recognize the city by the towering office buildings and all the familiar landmarks. I recognize New York by distinctive odors which I meet—through the agency also of other impressions, particularly sound—but the sense of smell plays a part.

"Now Broadway has a very distinctive odor down in the business district. Of course I don't mean to say that the moment you leave that thoroughfare the smell ceases or the moment you enter it it can be recognized. I should rather say that New York's business district has a characteristic odor. Of course it is practically impossible to define in words, to tell what elements are in it.

"The best way to define any odor—and the best way to define the Broadway odor—is by contrast. You can recognize it if you walk down to the Battery or along South street or along the North River and the return into the business and financial district afterward, and immediately you notice the difference of smell. Along the river you not only get the smell of the shipping, of the produce, of the docks, but the smell of the water—not the keen, fresh, invigorating smell of sea water, not yet the smell of inland water, but the smell of the New York harbor water—and it has a distinctive odor of its own. I have called it at times the 'river smell' and you recognize it not only down the harbor but further up along the river, where perhaps it is less combined with other odors.

"The Broadway smell I have described to myself as the 'city smell' because it can be met elsewhere too, though I believe the odor of Broadway is par excellence, the 'city smell.' It is faint, but clean and perhaps dry, to attempt to define it. It is just such an odor as you might expect where absolutely no vegetation exists, where there is nothing but piles of rock, brick and masonry, where even the earth is completely covered with mineral substance, so that its fresh smell cannot arise—but where, nevertheless, the streets are kept clean, where there is no living, no refuse about, very little smoke, but throughout which, nevertheless, the sun and the wind cannot penetrate and circulate with absolute freedom.

the New York subway too, for neither the Boston, the Philadelphia, the London or the Paris subways possess an odor precisely like it.

"Now, one of the curious things that I find absolutely characteristic

PEARY, WHO IS BELIEVED TO HAVE FOUND THE POLE; HIS ARCTIC SHIP

It is generally believed in Washington that Commander Robert E. Peary, the Arctic explorer, who left the United States last July for the Arctic circle, has reached the North pole. The experts base their opinion upon the fact that no word has been received from Peary since he left Etah, north Greenland, August 17, for the dash toward the pole. They declare that if the expedition had failed and Peary had been forced to turn back he would have sent out a courier with some news If he has been successful in reaching the goal of his ambition it is hardly probable that the world will be apprised of the fact before the latter part of August or September. The present expedition is the best equipped that ever has gone in search of the pole, and Arctic explorers everywhere predicted that Peary would meet with success when he left.

COAL COMING FROM ALASKA VERY FINE

Pacific Coast Prices Are Expected to Drop.

GREAT PROPERTIES IN ALASKA FIELDS

The Coal Can Be Secured Easily and Means the End of Almost Prohibitive Prices That Have Long Prevailed Along the Pacific Slope—A Boon for Western States.

Within four months, if all goes well, heavy shipments of high grade Alaska coal will begin to make their appearance upon the Pacific coast and the high and almost prohibitive prices that have so long prevailed upon the slope will come to an end. Such at least is the prediction of Stephen Birch of 45 Broadway.

"Few Easterners," said Mr. Birch, "are aware that the prevailing price for coal on the Pacific coast averages twelve dollars a ton. The effect this must have on manufacturing interests is obvious for with both coal and labor at a relatively higher figure, even considering the petroleum fields in California, the industries cannot compete with other sections.

"The remedy is obviously Alaska coal. At the present time the coast is drawing its coal supply from four points: Australia, India, Japan and Wales. The trans-continental freight tariff absolutely prohibits any extensive coal shipments from the East. Japanese coal is of a good quality and compares very favorably with the best grade of Welsh coal, while the Australian product is a trifle lower grade.

"Few people seem to have any idea of the commercial and mineral resources of Alaska, though I imagine that will remedy itself in time I was astonished at the progress that has been made in coal mining here There are close to $1,300 square miles of good workable coal lands already in hand close to 800,000 acres—and the extent of the coal bearing rock region is ten times that. There is no telling what the prospectors will develop.

"The Bering river workings furnish a very high grade coal, though workable coal of excellent quality is being mined in the Matanuska district at Cape La burne, the Alaskan peninsula, the Yukon basin, Anaktuvuk river, southeastern Alaska, Cork inlet, southwestern Alaska, Copper river, northern Alaska, and the Chicaloon creek. Very extensive tunnel workings are being carried on at the first place, and it is intended to ship direct in o San Francisco and Seattle by steamer from Cordova, close to Prince William sound.

"The coal is both anthracite and bituminus and of what is known as good steamship variety. Within four months there ought to be a heavy drop in the price of coal all along the Pacific coast, and this will undoubtedly affect the coming shipments from all four countries named where the slope now draws its supply.

"I understand large coal bearing properties have been laid open at Stone Canon California, but from what I hear transportation difficulties will prevent their working for some time to come. That difficulty which has largely held back Alaskan progress is rapidly being obviated

"In the past up there the operations have been small, owing to the difficulty of reaching tidewater and because there has been no provision made for granting title to tracts of sufficient area to assure profits on the heavy investments necessary, though this latter difficulty will, I imagine, be remedied shortly. The transportation problem has been practically solved, for a railroad is in course of rapid construction, and even with the high cost of labor Alaskan coal should be placed in San Francisco at a substantial drop in present prices

"The influence upon the commercial development—I refer of course to industrial manufacturing—should be vast and will no doubt ultimately result in bringing California, Washington and Oregon into more active competition with the East here Textile should take an upward leap in consequence.

"I'm not prepared of course to make any really accurate predictions as to costs, for I have merely looked the field over, but I see no reason why Alaskan coal should not be placed in the San Francisco coal pockets for six dollars a ton within a year's time. I'll let those familiar with the Western situation theorize upon the practical effect of that price

"With the improvement of facilities of all sorts there is no valid reason why that rate should not be further cut, and if the California workings are brought on as I have been told there is every reason to believe you will find foreign coal shipments dropping off with a suddenness that will result in a readjustment all around.

"The Copper River railway is now in an advanced stage of development and one branch of it has tapped the heaviest coal workings in the Bering river district while another branch is being rapidly extended to the copper properties above the Chitina river"—New York Sun.

Mackaye, Governor Prouty of Vermont, Governor Hughes of New York, Postmaster General Lemieux of Canada and Sir Lomer Gouin, premier of Quebec President Taft will speak at Ticonderoga on July 6 and during a part of the celebration will be a guest on board the palatial houseboat owned by Walter C. Witherbee, treasurer of the tercentenary committee. The president will make his headquarters at the Hotel Champlain. One of the principal features of the celebration will be the floating island which is built upon barges and will be towed about the lake. This island, which is equipped with a beautiful and elaborate scenic arrangement, will be the scene of the Indian pageants. At the close of the celebration a banquet will be held at Plattsburg, which the president will attend after he has reviewed the troops at Plattsburg barracks. The event will commemorate all the battles and other historic events in the Lake Champlain country from the time of Champlain down to the war of 1812.

THE SCENES FOUND ON AN ISOLATED CAPE

The Shifting Sands of Lonely Cape Hatteras.

A FINE BREEDING PLACE FOR BIRDS

The Sailing of the Fishing Skiffs About the Cape—Few Names in the Country More Familiar Than That of Cape and but Little Known of Place by General Public.

There are few names more widely known in the United States or localities about which a greater ignorance prevails than Cape Hatteras. Situated as it is at the angle where the long strip of sand beach from Cape Henry south turns at a right angle to the westward, with the widest part of Pamlico sound between it and the mainland and with the beach both west and north cut into several islands by inlets from sound to ocean, its position is most isolated. No means of transportation exist along the beach, and with the nearest railway station from which a regular transportation route is operated nearly a hundred miles away it is an easier place to talk about than to visit.

Like all sand promontories, the point of the cape is always moving. An old wreck imbedded deep in the sand and showing only the stumps of her masts and bowsprit and the rusty skeletons of what were once her chain plates and dead eyes is now a quarter of a mile or more inland. Twenty years ago she is said to have lain in the water, where she struck or drifted ashore, the land now outside of her having been built up since by the action of the wind and the waves. A resident told me that he owned the copper that still remained on her bottom, having bought it as it stood at the "vendue" or wreck sale. I don't think any one is likely to steal it from him.

In the summer time the breeding gulls and terns occupy certain shoals and bare "lumps" out in the sound, and now that the protective laws are being enforced their numbers are outward will steadily rock sidewise from one foot to the other with the idea that it makes the boat sail faster. And perhaps it does.—Charlotte Observer.

SATURDAY NIGHT FIRE CAUSES A SMALL LOSS

Swinging Gas Jet Starts Blaze in a South Main Street Bakery.

A gas jet used to furnish heat for drying pans, was left burning in the bakery room of McKibben & Shrock, on south Main street, about 12 o'clock Saturday night, and caused a fire which promised to do considerable damage, but was extinguished with small loss. A cupboard near the gas jet caught fire and the room was soon filled with smoke. Steven Hart, employed at Pace's barber shop, smelled the smoke and running to the fire department, aroused the firemen. The department made a quick response and two lines of hose were laid. The cupboard was destroyed, a door of the room was scorched and the window casing burned. A quantity of flour was lost and some damage caused to the building by smoke and water.

THE OPENING NUMBER PROVES VERY POPULAR

Star's Concert Series Opens at Lincon Park.

BAKER'S FINE BAND PLEASES THE CROWD

The Heavy Rain Keeps the Crowd Down in Numbers, but the Storm Failed To Reach Lincoln Park, So the Concert Was Neither Delayed or Interrupted.

The first of the Star's park band concerts gave evidence of the popularity of the undertaking, in spite of the weather's frowning Baker's band rendered the advertised program at Lincoln park, to the plaudits of a considerable crowd, and it was generally agreed that the concerts are to prove an immense hit The opening concert would have been heard by a couple of thousand people had not the rain poured in torrents shortly before the advertised hour But the heavy down-pour in the central part of the city did not reach to the north, and Lincoln park was free from storm So Director Baker rendered the program as published, each number eliciting enthusiastic applause Of course the music is good—Baker's band is one of the famous organizations of all Ohio and a musical credit to the city of Marion

The Star's undertaking has awakened a lot of favorable comment much approval being expressed outside the ranks of those who heard the opening number It is generally considered a contribution to popular diversion and entertainment well worth of commendation

The second concert will be given weather permitting, at Garfield park East Marion Sunday afternoon July 4 Mr Baker will specially arrange the program to include national airs making the concert particularly appropriate to the anniversary of American Independence
